

Former Atlantan Describes London Under Nazi Raid

(Editor's Note: This description of life in London during a Nazi air raid was written especially for The Atlanta Constitution and the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen-Times by Robert Bunnelle, formerly connected with the Atlanta office of the Associated Press but now attached to the London bureau of the organization.)

By ROBERT BUNNELLE.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(AP)—The communique said simply, "Enemy aircraft made attacks on London last night. They began soon after dark and continued for several hours. Damage was caused by high explosive bombs and a number of people were killed and others injured."

Dismissed in these few lines of type was a story of human beings being blown to bits—human beings just like Jack and Betty Smith, of Chicago; of homes being pulverized—homes of brick and mortar just like those on Peachtree street in Atlanta; and of businesses being destroyed—businesses just like the ones on Haywood street in Asheville. But, behind all this, there's still another story—the story of the average Londoner who didn't get killed or maimed and went to work as usual next morning. His story is the story of millions and it's repeated night after night and day after day.

"... Fleet Street Had Some Distractions To Cope With."

Here's one such story for this one night. It might be any Londoner's story for almost any night since September 7, 1940.

The early darkness was thick with London's particular mixture of smoke and mist.

People hurrying to the subways to get home before the raid caromed off each other with cheerful "Sorries!" and the trains—as is always the case at that zero hour just before the bombers are expected—were jammed. Most of the conversation was speculation as to whether the weather might give London a "quiet night" by keeping the raiders earthbound. It didn't.

The guns were already going when I got to my station and the searchlights were waving their wands of light all over the sky. Off to the east a flare was floating down slowly and machinegunners somewhere were banging away trying to shoot it out before the bomber that dropped it could spot his target in its light. Hurrying—because nobody wants to stroll leisurely when the shell splinters and bombs are falling—I bumped into a pillar box and a couple of pedestrians headed the other way before my eyes got accustomed to the dark.

I was home in about 10 minutes and the doorman at the apartment building grinned amiably, "Looks like another bad night, sir. You may be wanting to come down from that fifth floor to the shelter."

It was a fairly bad night; but no worse than many other nights.

Owing to the Bunnelles' somewhat ill-considered hospitality in inviting some callers the night before to stay for dinner and finish off a beef roast we'd wangled from the butcher, our meat ration for the week was exhausted. Mrs. Bunnelle informed me she hadn't been able to get any fish at this particular market where we are registered to buy our food under the rationing scheme, so it was either eat at a restaurant or eat tinned baked beans and bread and margarine. I was pretty hungry, so we slithered around the corner in the gunfire to a restaurant. They didn't have any beef either but we got a good meal of mutton chops, boiled potatoes, and braised celery. We ran into some friends from the Russian embassy who suggested bridge at their flat. We suggested it at ours. While the argument continued the blitz increased in intensity so we finally decided to pass up the bridge as none of us felt like traveling the extra distance to the others' apartment and then running the risk of being unable to get home.

There were splinters of shells on the sidewalk and broken glass on the street as we made our way back to our own building. When we got up stairs we each picked up a book and settled down to read awhile. The guns were very

ATTEMPT TO BAR U. S. SHIPS FROM CONVOYS IS DEFEATED

Talmadge May Sign Two Vital Bills Today

Miller, Facing Ouster, Ready To Quit Office

Administration Leaders Elated as Important Measures Pass

By LUKE GREENE.

Governor Talmadge is expected to sign the first two new laws of his third term administration today after the senate concurs in minor house amendments to the family driver's license bill and the highway reorganization measure.

The house yesterday had passed the reorganization bill, 146 to 11, and the driver's license bill, 176 to 11.

Administration leaders were elated over the passage of these two measures, which constituted a vital part of Governor Talmadge's program, and the senate was expected to lose no time in getting them to the chief executive for his signature.

(Board of managers of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia voted yesterday a five-point legislative program including a proposal to extend Governor Talmadge's present term. Story will be found on Page 4.) W. L. Miller, who will be ousted as chairman of the highway board upon final passage of the

Premier Metaxas, Greek Genius, Dies

By The Associated Press.

ATHENS, Jan. 29.—General John Metaxas, the "Little John" who dictated to Greece in peace and directed her aggressive defense in war, died today, whispering: "It is not for myself that I mind, but I place my hope in the Greeks."

"Premier for life," he died of a throat infection in his suburban home in Kiphissia at 6:20 a. m. (10:20 p. m. Atlanta Time Tuesday) while his soldiers were fighting in Albania, on the snow-covered soil of the Italians who invaded them, fighting for the life of Greece.

Metaxas, 70, short, chesty, dolorous of visage, had been secretly ill for three weeks.

To his countrymen he was a modern Miltiades, the spiritual counterpart of the hero who led the Athenians to victory against the invading Persians at the Battle of Marathon.

King George II, with whose approval Metaxas obtained dictatorial powers by a coup d'etat August 4, 1936, quickly named a tall and studious banker, Alexander Korizis, to be premier.

Korizis, 55, a close colleague of Metaxas but lacking any extensive army or political experience, also will hold Metaxas' other portfolios of war, aviation, foreign affairs, navy and education.

With the Italians, aided by the Germans at least with planes, apparently ready to start a new offensive against the Greeks, Metaxas' death was viewed elsewhere in the Balkans as the heaviest blow Greece could suffer. In Belgrade, political circles termed him almost irreplaceable. He was an acknowledged military genius.

It appeared that, since the new premier lacks military knowledge, it will be largely up to Generalissimo Alexander Papagos, the Greek military commander-in-chief, to fight off the Italians, with British counsel and aid.

On January 7 General Metaxas had attacks of dizziness, and a medical examination indicated a kidney ailment. He went back to work, however, until a tonsil infection developed.

Last Sunday his condition became really grave and in the next two days he was given three blood transfusions.

The chief physician of the British fleet flew from Crete to his bedside and, ironically, a German specialist was en route from Vienna when he died.

Shortly before he died he recovered consciousness and his last words were addressed to the minister of home security, Constantine Maniandakis, who was by his bed.

"So there is no hope whatever?" he murmured. "You understand, Costa, it is not for myself that I mind, but I place my hope in the Greeks."

WELL, WELL, SENATOR—It was Senator George's 63d birthday yesterday, and look who dropped around by his office to help him celebrate. None other than the glamorous Lana Turner, of the films. Lana is in Washington to attend a party celebrating the President's birthday tonight. (Story on Page 2.)

Roosevelt Wins First Victory For British Aid

House Foreign Affairs Group Approves 3 Amendments.

By The United Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—President Roosevelt today won his first victory in the fight over the administration's British aid bill when the House Foreign Affairs Committee rejected an amendment which would have banned use of United States warships to convoy war materials abroad.

The committee approved instead an amendment stating that the bill should not be construed as authorizing use of convoys. This would have no legislative force because the President's power to make whatever use he desires of the nation's military and naval might stems from the Constitution.

Life of Bill Limited.

Mr. Roosevelt was opposed to limiting this authority, but he made it plain at recent press conferences that the government was not even considering the use of convoys which he described as a hazardous undertaking.

The committee adopted three other amendments today and rejected 15. Those accepted, reportedly with the President's approval, would limit the life of the legislation to June 30, 1943; would require Mr. Roosevelt to file reports with congress every 90 days on transactions made, and would specify that the chief executive consult with ranking Army and navy leaders before sending war materials abroad.

Substitute Rejected.

The anti-convooy amendment was sponsored by Representative Karl Mundt, Republican, South Dakota, who plans to offer it from the floor. His substitute bill, which would have set up a fund of $2,000,000,000 to be used for loans or outright gifts to friendly powers, also was rejected.

Also killed were Republican amendments which would have excluded Russia as a possible beneficiary under the lend-lease program; prevented the disposition of any vessels of the navy to a belligerent nation without the consent of congress; denied the use of American ports for repairing or outfitting of warships of a belligerent nation; excluded aggressor nations from benefits under the legislation; required the comptroller general to keep a record of transactions and report them to congress, and required certification by military and naval officials that exported articles were not essential to the national defense.

Vote Kept Secret.

Chairman Sol Bloom, Democrat, New York, refused to reveal the vote on the amendments. He said virtually all controversial features of the bill were disposed of today and that the committee expected to conclude consideration of it tomorrow. House leaders are planning to open debate on Monday.

Defeat of the anti-convooy amendment coincided with a warning by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that imposition of such a restriction on presidential powers would be "a bad thing," "very unfortunate," and "would indicate misapprehension."

To Hear Gerard.

Stimson spent the entire day before the committee, and he will appear again tomorrow to give the group confidential data concerning current British needs and the status of this nation's defense program. Also scheduled to testify tomorrow are James W. Gerard, Continued on Page 12, Column 2.

One Dead, 19 Soldiers Hurt In Mississippi Train Wreck

Cars Overturn on Straight Stretch of Track Near Laurel; Federal and Military Authorities Begin Investigation of Accident.

SANDERSVILLE, Miss., Jan. 29.—(AP)—Federal and military authorities today began an immediate investigation of the noonday derailment of an Indiana National Guard troop train on the Southern Railway near here, which caused the death of the fireman and injured 19 soldiers, three seriously.

Governor Paul B. Johnson sent Major General Thomas J. Grayson here to investigate, and state highway patrolmen at the scene of the wreck, a straightaway stretch, said three Federal Bureau of Investigation operatives were there.

Eight cars of the 12-car special, one of 33 trains bringing the 38th Division to near-by Camp Shelby, left the track, most of them overturning. The engine was demolished.

A. V. Smith, fireman, of Meridian, Miss., was killed and Corporal James Parker and Privates Walter Horner and Norman Hick, all of Indianapolis, severely injured when a buckling rail pierced the baggage car, in which they were preparing lunch. They were taken to the General Hospital at Laurel. Hoxey L. Brown, engineer, said he slowed the train in going into a wide curve north of here and the engine left the rails when he reopened the throttle. A. M. Tipton, assistant superintendent, said cause of the wreck could not be determined immediately.

An eyewitness reported hearing talk of sabotage, but there was no official comment or confirmation of this.

The War Department said the train, en route to Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, carried 26 officers and 154 men, all of Indianapolis.

Included were troops of the medical detachment of the 151st Infantry, Company D of the 151st and the Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 152d Infantry. An hour after the wreck, an ambulance driver and a civilian were hurt when a car collided with the ambulance at the top of a hill. Two injured soldiers in the wrecked ambulance did not suffer additional injuries and were brought to Hattiesburg in another ambulance. Army ambulances and doctors hurried to the scene from the Camp Shelby base hospital. Tucker Key, of Kentwood, La., a civilian eyewitness, and one of the first on the scene, said: "The wreck occurred just at dinner time and for most of the soldiers that was the worst part of it—they missed their meal. Five cooks were scalded in the upsetting of the kitchen car. Captain J. L. Spellman, 151st Infantry, Regimental Headquarters, Indianapolis, commanding officer of the train, got word of the wreck to Laurel by flagging a passing bus driver on near-by Highway No. 11.

Cooking School Record Is Seen In Attendance

Mrs. Katharine Balbridge To Show Atlantan Modern Trends.

The most modern cooking classes ever conducted in Atlanta will be held next week when The Constitution opens its four-day cooking school at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning at the Erlanger theater with Mrs. Katharine Balbridge, nationally known home economics expert, presenting the cooking lecture-demonstrations.

Mrs. Balbridge's practical experience as a homemaker will be offered to the men and women of Atlanta and she will discuss the new methods of food preparation and will show how modern kitchen appliances make cooking attractive and easy.

With the modern food preparation, including the easiest and tastiest methods of cooking meats; modern kitchen appliances and gadgets; and the newest styles; the attendance at the school is expected to exceed even the record set at former Constitution cooking classes.

The merchants are co-operating with The Constitution, sponsor of the school, and will give away valuable merchandise including an electric range, a radio, numerous baskets of foods, furniture, clothes, and beautiful special gifts of a wide variety.

One of the features of the school will be a fashion show, with the latest wearing apparel shown by a group of models. The clothes will be those just appearing in the Atlanta stores and will be a spring fashion forecast.

The doors of the theater will open each morning at 8:30 o'clock and the class will begin promptly at 9 o'clock. The daily sessions will be held until 11:30 o'clock.

Paralysis Fund Drive Reaches Climax in Gala Parties Tonight

Many Activities Swell Collections To Fight Dread Malady.

During the next 24 hours many thousands of Atlantans will be concentrating on the great drive to raise funds against the menace of infantile paralysis and the celebration of the President's birthday at seven big parties beginning at 9 o'clock and running until 11 in the morning.

Based on the tickets already sold, according to A. L. Belle Isle, Fulton county chairman, the attendance at the parties will top all previous records, and the funds being collected on streets, in offices at schools and in business houses throughout the city and the county, will establish a new high for local participation in this annual benefit celebration.

Twenty-five members of the Business Women's Club and 75 Salvation Army lassies joined forces to carry polio drive contribution receptacles to all parts of the city Wednesday, and they will be seen on streets and in office buildings all day today. All contributors will receive the lapel badges which symbolize the drive as they place their gifts in the receptacles.

Three "Mile of Dimes" tables have been set up in the city under the sponsorship of the Salvation Army—on Peachtree street in front of Davison's; at Five Points in front of the Morris Plan Bank; on Broad street in front of Rich's, and these have been filling up rapidly since their appearance early Wednesday.

Seven great parties will be centers of festivity tonight, each with a leading orchestra, each to be visited by a traveling unit of entertainers who will put on a floor show at each of the parties—and thousands of Atlantans al-

The floor show is of exceptional caliber, having been assembled by Eulene Holmes, and will be presented by Mike Benton as master of ceremonies.

Included in the floor show unit will be Pittman & Evelyn in their famed swing waltz act; Alice Strickland, the sensational control acrobatic performer; Mary Ann Linane, with her high-kick toe dance specialty. The singing trio, "Meenie, Minnie, Mo," and Kay Kimball and her authentic Hawaiian dances. Working on a 30-minute schedule and escorted by a detail of motorcycle police, this troupe will visit all the parties and keep things moving throughout the evening.

Wallace, Solons Honor George On Birthday

Georgia Senator Is 63; Spends Day With Committee.

(Picture on Page 1.)
By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Vice President Wallace joined with a group of house and senate Democratic leaders today in giving a birthday luncheon to Senator George, of Georgia.

The Georgia senator, just turned 63, had not been aware of his birthday anniversary until he reached the capitol. He celebrated the occasion otherwise by presiding over a meeting of the Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is chairman.

Prior to the luncheon he was presented with a birthday cake by Lana Turner, movie actress who came to Washington with other Hollywood stars to take part in the President's birthday celebration tomorrow for the benefit of the Warm Springs Foundation. Miss Turner was brought to the senate offices of Senator George by Carter Barron, former Georgia Tech football star, now the manager of a chain of theaters in Washington.

Attending the luncheon besides Vice President Wallace were Speaker of the House Rayburn, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the majority leader; Senator Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina; Senator Byrd, of Virginia; Senator Tydings, of Maryland; Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Senator McKellar, of Tennessee; former Senator Minion, of Indiana, and Colonel Edwin Halsey, secretary of the senate.

Woodward Sentenced on Fraud Charge

Former Bunco Chief Gets Two Years and Eight Months.

Floyd Woodward, one-time head of a million-dollar "bunco" ring, yesterday was sentenced at Gainesville, Ga., to two years and eight months in a federal penitentiary for mail fraud in racketeer swindles by the ring he operated in Atlanta 20 years ago.

Sentence was passed by United States District Judge Robert L. Russell, who also placed Woodward on five years' probation, beginning at the expiration of the prison term.

Asked if he had anything to say before being sentenced, Woodward replied in a clear, deep voice: "No, sir. I have entered a plea of guilty. I ask the mercy of the court and I leave it in your hands."

In Jovial Mood.

He was neatly dressed and appeared in a jovial mood as he shook hands with his counsel and several spectators after sentence was passed.

Following the action in Woodward's case, Judge Russell immediately set 10 o'clock Monday morning for a hearing in Atlanta on a habeas corpus petition in behalf of a former Woodward lieutenant, William W. (Swift) Klein, who was arrested in Atlanta January 22 while in the city as a government witness in the Woodward case.

Says Arrest Illegal.

Klein's petition further stated that he had been held in the Atlanta city jail since his arrest, and that since he came here as a government witness, the arrest and detention were illegal.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin announced following completion of Woodward's sentence that he will be tried in Fulton county superior court on charges of murder.

Boykin said he will move at once to attempt to find witnesses in connection with the 22-year-old slaying of Ed Mills in Atlanta.

Woodward was indicted along with four others on charges of shooting Mills to death April 2, 1919, according to records at the Fulton county courthouse. The four others included Klein, W. Clyde Smith, M. Holzman, alias Abe Holzman, alias Black Mike, and Little Brickey.

Charges Against Brickey

Charges against Brickey were not pressed December 24, 1924, but the accusation remains open against the others. Boykin said he does not believe he can proceed against any of the defendants except Woodward, adding he probably will be able to produce witnesses against Woodward.

Judge Russell said he experienced difficulty in arriving at a decision on the sentence because of Woodward's record in California. He declared neighbors said Woodward had lived an exemplary life in the little town of Monrovia, Cal.

The judge added, however, there were indications that Woodward carried on the same unlawful practices while out west, although, he continued, these indications did not appear strong enough for any further government action.

Warned on Associates.

Judge Russell warned Woodward not even to be seen with anyone having merely the reputation of being a confidence man during his probationary period, adding that this would constitute a violation of the probation.

Commenting on the probation period, the judge said it would give Woodward a chance to prove that his neighbors had been right in declaring he had been a model citizen while in California.

Approximately 100 persons were in the courtroom when Woodward was sentenced. Among those present were Herbert Graham, the postal inspector who trailed Woodward since his disappearance from Atlanta in 1920 and finally found him last September, following a tip from a newspaper man who recognized Woodward from pictures in a magazine.

Bishop Mikell To Read Lights Feast Service

The Feast of Lights, celebrating the manifestation of Christ to the world as a light, will be observed at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Cathedral of Saint Philip. Bishop Mikell will read the service.

The service is arranged around a candle at the top of a pyramid in the chancel. From this candle 12 lighted candles, representing the apostles, light individual candles. Twenty daughters of the King, who sponsor the service, also light candles typifying the 20 centuries of Christianity.

Polio Patients To Have Own Cake of Dimes

Dinner To Feature Foundation Celebration Tonight.

By SARITA RUTH BEN'ARY.
Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Jan. 29. Who said you can't have your cake and eat it?

President Roosevelt can certainly refute the old adage, for each year since the first celebration of his birthday in behalf of victims of infantile paralysis, more cakes have been baked in his honor than some people could eat in a lifetime.

So while the nation contributes to the march of dimes and the mile of dimes, the patients of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation are contributing silver ingredients to decorate a cake of dimes for the President's birthday.

The money raised at the Foundation, like the funds from celebrations throughout the country, will be divided equally between the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the state chapter. No part of it will remain at the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation.

On the radio, in the newspapers, in stores and in schools—everywhere—is evidence of a unified fight against the dread "polio" germ; but never have dimes been so freely given as by these victims of infantile paralysis, for they, like President Roosevelt, in whose name the great drive is carried on, have felt the vicious blow of the enemy and know that every contribution is a potential weapon against the crippling germ.

Others' Misfortune.
It is not so much for themselves that they are concerned. They know that even in their misfortune they are the fortunate ones, for they are receiving the care and treatment which in the years gone by, and even in the present, has been denied to other victims because of the lack of sufficient funds to care for every one. At the Foundation they have seen and felt the results of proper medical and physical therapy treatment, and they realize how essential it is to any amount of recovery that can be made. But even more than this is their desire to help annihilate the disease through tracking it down and finding a preventive to safeguard the future of others.

Some of them have hardly yet had time to recover from the shock of being stricken, yet the spirit of the drive has developed such intensity that Mrs. Frank Harmon, chairman of the birthday committee at the foundation, reports that on the first day of the drive nearly all the buttons had been sold out.

On the President's birthday, tomorrow, treatment will go on as usual at the foundation during the day. Tomorrow night, however, there will be a March of Dimes leading to the Cake of Dimes as a line of wheelchairs stretching the length of Georgia Hall files into the dining room. Dinner will be a pleasant affair, with songs punctuating the various courses. This will be followed by a movie in the playhouse, starring Errol Flynn in "The Sea Hawk."

THREE NEGRO EVENTS TO AID CELEBRATION

Atlanta's Negro population will celebrate the President's birthday Thursday night with three principal events—two dances and a bridge tournament. J. W. Dobbs, chairman of the Negro division, announced.

One of the dances will be held at the Top Hat Club on Auburn avenue, while the other will be at the community center at the University Homes housing project. The bridge tournament will be for men at the Masonic Lodge on Auburn avenue.

Chairman Dobbs reminded Negroes of Atlanta that the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis recently financed a new hospital at Tuskegee Institute, in Alabama, where Negro children will receive treatment for infantile paralysis.

"DAT AIN'T NO POSSUM"—Right. It's an armadillo—a late armadillo—from South America. It was going along Central avenue at Alice street yesterday morning, from whence no one knows, when R. T. Hinton stalked up. "I just hit him over de head quick," R. T. explained later to Wildlife Department officials.

Rally, Worship, Allan Jones Dance To Mark Will Attend Defense Week Variety Fete

Reserve Officers Here Plan Busy Season February 12-22.

A mass meeting of Army reservists, a city-wide church service, and a grand military ball will be highlights of the annual Atlanta observance of National Defense Week—February 12 to 22—it was announced last night at the semi-monthly meeting of the Fifth District Chapter, Reserve Officers' Association, by Captain Robert M. McFarland Jr., National Defense Week chairman.

Lieutenant John T. Carlton, president of the chapter, presided at the meeting which followed an executive committee dinner at the Tavern tea room.

Captain McFarland said a high ranking Army officer, to be announced, will address the mass meeting on the evening of February 12 in the Tech chapel. He will represent the War Department in setting out principles of preparedness which are to be emphasized during the week.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System of Georgia and a Spanish War veteran, will be principal speaker at the church service, to be held on the evening of February 16 at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

The military ball, usually held in joint celebration of George Washington's birthday and the conclusion of National Defense Week, will take place this year on February 21 at the Biltmore hotel. Captain C. T. Conyers is chairman of arrangements.

Every day Constitution Want Ads start many people on the highway to happiness.

Atlantan Wants Breakfast, Gets An Armadillo

R. T. Hinton Finds Strange Animal on Street Here.

R. T. Hinton, a Negro who lives in the rear of 441 South Pryor street, started out early yesterday morning to get something for breakfast, but he wasn't exactly pleased with what he found—an armadillo. As a matter of fact, he was so completely upset he forgot about eating.

As he reached the intersection of Alice street and Central avenue this queer-looking animal, whose native habitat is South and Central America with some species being found as far north as Texas, crossed the sidewalk in front of him.

Had No Chance.

He didn't give the meek little creature a chance to employ its only defense against attack—rolling into a ball within its armor plates—before he crashed a heavy rock on its skull.

"I didn't know what that thing was," Hinton said. "I didn't even try to think—just hit him over the head."

"He kinda excited me," he added, "and I couldn't take no chances."

Learns About Kill.

Hinton then took his kill to the Wildlife Division of the Natural Resources Department at the state capitol, where they told him what it was and that it was harmless. He also learned the armadillo has but a few teeth and they are practically useless and that the chief diet of this strange animal is ants, other insects and vegetables.

Undoubtedly Hinton would be interested in knowing that some natives of South America eat the flesh of armadillos, which is flavored with insects and decayed matter, and even consider it a delicacy.

The armadillo is not a native of this section of the country, but many have been found in arid areas of Georgia and Florida, and just how this little fellow got so far from home is not known.

Vinson Offers Bill Seeking To Curb Strikes

Proposes 30-Day Wait Before Walkout on Naval Jobs.

By The Associated Press.
An influential house member asked congress yesterday to curb strikes in industries producing naval supplies a short time after 400 to 500 union workers had walked off a $1,550,000 Army construction job at Wright field, Dayton, Ohio.

The legislation, introduced by Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, would forbid a strike on any naval project until 30 days after a naval defense labor board had filed a report on the dispute. In this respect, the legislation is somewhat similar to the Railway Mediation act.

Vinson's bill outlaws efforts to compel workers on naval projects to join or refrain from joining labor unions.

Broad Definitions.
If the bill becomes law, Vinson expressed the belief that any worker will be able to get a job on a naval project despite existing closed shop contracts.

Vinson said the bill applied only to naval contractors. Such contractors were defined, however, as any one engaged in "the production of arms, implements of war, articles or supplies."

During the 30-day period in which strikes would be forbidden, contractors would not be permitted to change wage rates or working conditions.

Seen As Test.
The Wright field strike was called after four electrical workers, who are not members of the American Federation of Labor, were hired by the contractor. The strikers are members of the AFL Building Trades Union.

The strike was viewed in some quarters as a test of the Building Trades Union's "no-strike" policy. George Masterson, union vice president, recently announced adoption of a "hard and fast policy" flatly barring strikes "for any reason whatsoever on defense projects."

In another labor development, Representative Hoffman, Republican, Michigan, said that a "man from Michigan" had told him that Henry Ford had informed government officials he would turn his automobile plants over to the government to operate at $1 a year rather than permit a closed union shop in his organization.

Ford was not at his Dearborn, Mich., office yesterday. Sources close to him there said they had no knowledge of such a statement.

R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), commented that "Ford's objection is not at this moment to a closed shop; he objects to his workers having the right to join a union."

CIO workers at the International Harvester Company's Chicago tractor works also went on strike yesterday. Company officials said the concern was engaged in producing several million dollars' worth of tractors for the government. The walkout followed a breakdown in wage negotiations.

Dr. Perlzweig To Give Talk Here Monday

World Jewish Congress Leader To Address Council Parley.

The Atlanta Jewish community will hear presented for the first time next Monday afternoon proposals for the formulation of the basis on which rights for more than five million Jews in Europe may be secured at the conclusion of the war. They will be presented by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, of London, chairman of the British section of World Jewish Congress.

The national assembly of the Council of Federations and Welfare Funds, of which Dr. Perlzweig's appearance is a part, opens a four-day session in Atlanta tomorrow at the Biltmore hotel. Dr. Perlzweig will discuss plans for establishment of an institute with headquarters in New York for the purpose of developing the new foundations on which Jewish life should be rebuilt in Europe after the peace. He will talk at 3 o'clock Monday at the Biltmore hotel. He further will relate negotiations already entered into with the British, French and other democratic governments regarding future rights for Jews.

As the head of the British section of the World Jewish Congress, which represents 99 Jewish communities, Dr. Perlzweig has served as one of the political representatives in defense of the status of Jews. He received from the British government, in a letter from Rt. Hon. Arthur Greenwood, a member of the British cabinet, assurances of help in securing justice for the Jews at the end of the war. Later, General

De Gaulle, head of the Free French movement, in a cablegram, assured the Jewish community that the Vichy anti-Semitic decrees would be abolished at the end of the war.

The American Jewish Congress, which is sponsoring the institute, at the conclusion of the last war helped to bring about the incorporation of the minorities rights clauses into the peace treaties and the recognition also in these treaties of the pledges contained in the Balfour declaration.

Charles Lyle, Fulton Police Veteran, Dies

Illness While on Hunt Results Fatally for Desk Sergeant.

Charles E. Lyle, 47, a friend to the newspaperman, died yesterday at a private sanitarium following an illness of one week.

Lyle, for 24 years, a member of the Fulton county police, spent the greater portion of that time as desk sergeant. In that capacity he knew what was going on at all times in all parts of the county, and was always ready to help the reporters covering the courthouse to get stories in remote parts of the county.

In addition to being an outspoken friend of the newspapermen, Lyle was among the most popular of the county employees.

His greatest hobby was hunting and fishing, and he never had any trouble getting companions for a hunting or fishing trip. He was stricken ill while on a hunting trip last week. Companions carried him to his home at 118 East Point avenue, East Point, and following a brief examination, his physician ordered him transferred to a hospital.

Lyle is survived by his wife; two daughters, Misses Eva Mae and Louise Lyle; his mother, Mrs. J. G. Lyle; a sister, Mrs. J. V. Stephens, and a brother, C. S. Lyle.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Harry G. Poole, with the Rev. Al Peacock officiating. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery. Officers of the department will be pallbearers.

The Gentleman--

From Ben Hill... From Thomson... From Polk...

Representative C. H. Holtzendorf, of Ben Hill.

Dr. C. H. Holtzendorf, of Ben Hill, has a name long-time connected with Georgia legislatures. His name was in the first legislative body in Georgia and on the list to formulate rules for the state. He has a picture of the old Savannah session building where the meeting was held.

Although he is serving his second term, he is not in politics. He's a dentist and that's his major interest. He hopes this session to see the legislators give an honest service so that the taxpayers will be benefited. He's 65 and has one daughter.

Senator Reuben Burnside, of Thomson (29th District).

Senator Reuben Burnside, an attorney, thought that legislative work would go hand-in-hand with his law practice. He thought it would give him good experience in governmental affairs. So he ran for the post in the upper chamber and now he's here to reap every benefit which comes his way.

He views membership in the legislature as an opportunity to serve the state. He's 42, has one child, and has no particular ambition for that child. He thinks parents should only guide children, but in the end should let them choose their own business or profession.

Constitution Photos--Carolyn McKenzie. Representative Robert Campbell, of Polk.

Robert Campbell, Polk representative and a freshman in the legislature, is a farmer and an ardent believer in soil conservation. On his acreage he is planting numerous rows of pine trees which backs up his faith in reforestation.

He raises none of the "money crops" and thinks seriously of combining cattle business with farming instead of sticking to the one-crop system. By this method, he plans to take in money each month in the year instead of just during the fall.

Two Bills Vital To Talmadge Near Passage

highway bill, was preparing to close shop and go back to Lakeland yesterday afternoon after the house overwhelmingly approved the bill. He issued a statement explaining his position.

The Governor's first move after he signs the reorganization legislation will be to reappoint the members of the highway board.

Immediately after his inauguration he designated three members to serve on the board, telling two of them to wait around until there are legal vacancies. Since that time, however, one other place was made vacant by the resignation of Herman Watson.

W. E. Wilburn, now serving as a member of the board, is slated to succeed Miller as chairman. The other two members already appointed are S. E. Vandiver, of Lavonia, and T. G. Tyson, of Camilla.

No opposition is expected to develop in the senate over the amendments attached to the bills by the house. Administration leaders regarded them as being virtually ready for the statute books.

One piece of proposed legislation, which has proved a thorn in the side of the administration, is likely to come up again today, however. That is the bill providing for suspension of the state treasurer and comptroller general by the Governor.

This bill was voted down in the senate, but members of the upper house agreed to reconsider it and it is slated for another vote.

Although the Governor's address to the general assembly Monday, in which he urged passage of the bill, had a pronounced effect upon the legislators, there is some intimation that there will be opposition on the second vote.

It will have an amendment which will satisfy a large percentage of those who voted against it, but there still will be a minority who insist the measure goes a bit too far. The amendment provides that in the event of a suspension of either of the state officials the Governor will call the general assembly into session within 30 days to ratify his action or restore the ousted official to office.

Senator Cecil R. Franklin, of Rockmart, plans to introduce a substitute bill providing that when the Governor shall call upon the comptroller general, the state treasurer, state school superintendent or secretary of state to perform any special function and he refuses to comply upon constitutional grounds, the executive department will then call upon the attorney general for opinion upon the legality of the demand.

If the opinion should be that the demand was constitutional, the state official would proceed to carry out the chief executive's request. In the event the opinion was adverse, the state treasurer or other official could refuse to comply with the request if the opinion were in favor of the Governor and the official obstinately declined to comply, he would be subject to suspension by the Governor.

Job-Seekers Pack Capitol, Ark Officials

Crowds Swarm Over Statehouse, Harass Department Heads.

By WILLARD COPE.

Job-seekers, voracious, insistent and as numerous as midsummer lilies of the field—which they do not in the least resemble—still have the heads of Georgia's governmental departments on the run.

After some two and a half weeks of the new administration, things are still no better. "We're just about holding our own, but only just," privately advised one nervous official. "The Lord knows where we'll be able to settle down to work." Capitol corridors and reception rooms were swarming. Wild tales were in circulation, but a canvass of offices showed it wasn't true that 40,000 applications had been mailed, telephoned or made in person to the revenue department; or that 8,000 aspirants to the Confederate grey of the state patrol had been making Commissioner John Goodwin unhappy; or that the State Welfare Department had been besieged by more than 12,000 hopefuls seeking to latch onto the pay roll.

Statistics and comment, however, were most interesting.

The office of Tom Linder, commissioner of agriculture, estimated that between 7,000 and 8,000 persons had applied for jobs in his department. Brother Brick Miller, new chief of the Welfare Department, was eloquent.

5 Per Cent Work.

"I figure," he gasped, "that I'm being able to devote 5 per cent of my time to the job I'm supposed to do. The rest, by which I mean a full 95 per cent, I have to give to listening to people who want to observe Rules One and Two. You never heard of Rules One and Two? Well, Rule One is 'Get on the pay roll.' Rule Two is 'Stay on.'"

"I come down here to this office at 7 o'clock in the morning and I stay here to about bedtime. It is a mad house. That gives me an idea. The insane asylum at Milledgeville is under this department. If the rush doesn't slack off soon, I'm going to send in a reservation. I want to be quoted to that effect. The situation is grim."

Less heart-rending, but fully as gripping was the brief recital of Revenue Commissioner Jack M. Forrester. As befitted a revenue commissioner he gave comparative statistics.

"So far, we've had between 1,500 and 2,000 applications," he said. "There are about 300 jobs, and that number will be reduced before I'm through. So I estimate that we are having applications in a ratio of ten to one in point of even remote potentiality."

Conceding that a remote potentiality was a pretty distant affair, the proprietor of the canvass, or survey, went on to interview—and at what a moment!—Chairman W. Lint Miller, of the Highway Department, who had just been legislated out of his job an hour before.

"Yes, they've been around here in droves looking for places," said the retiring chairman. He had a twinkle in his eyes as he added: "For some reason, though, they haven't been coming to me."

"There's no way," he went on,

"to get anything like accurate figures yet on just how many have applied, but certainly there have been several thousand."

Out at the state patrol headquarters on Confederate avenue, Captain J. J. Elliott, speaking for Commissioner Goodwin, was cautious. He was laboring under the strain of it all, but didn't want to seem to regard the applicants with discourtesy.

"We're having quite a few applications, but we're not swamped," he said. "We're able to grind them out pretty fast." Then he made an illuminating additional remark. "Of course," he said, "we just hand them the applications here and let them go home and fill them out and mail them in."

As a sort of corollary to the census, or canvass, it was developed that the pogrom, as massacre, of hundreds of clerks, stenographers and other office help, originally scheduled for last week, now awaited the adjournment of the general assembly late in March.

The reason frankly assigned by analysts was the unfavorable reaction throughout the state, the press and the assembly to the first axe-swinging done immediately after the Talmadge administration took over.

Gross Backs Talmadge Bill -- With Sarcasm

Representative Frank Gross, of Stephens, house floor leader in the Rivers' regime, spoke yesterday for Governor Talmadge's bill to cut the cost of drivers' licenses required by the State Highway Patrol.

"Twenty-five cents is enough to pay for the protection we'll get under the highway patrol since it has been ruined," he said.

$909,000,000 Naval Outlay Awaits Signing

Funds for 400 New Boats Voted Swiftly by Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—(P)—Swift senate approval sent to the White House today legislation authorizing a $909,000,000 expenditure by the Navy for new shipyards, ordnance manufacturing facilities and 400 small craft such as subchasers, torpedo boats and minesweepers.

The senate acted without a record vote after a brief discussion in which several senators urged that their sections be given consideration in allotting the contracts.

The bill brought to $1,209,000,000 the total of naval authorizations which have received final congressional approval this week. The senate sent to the President on Monday a $300,000,000 measure to modernize the fleet's air defense.

Before acting on the bill the senate heard a request from Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, that his state be given consideration in allotting contracts under naval and maritime commission building programs.

He protested that his state was the only one touching the Atlantic, Gulf of Pacific in which there was no naval base or shipbuilding operations. Russell declared he was at a "complete loss" to understand the "total lack of attention to facilities of my own state" in favor of "a few favored sections of the country."

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 29.—(P)—Major Evans Fordyce, California United States Marine Corps, retired, veteran of eight years' service in China, predicted today Japan would attack Great Britain's Singapore naval base within 90 days, coincident with Germany's expected assault upon England.

Major Carlson has spent many months traveling through China, including Japanese-occupied territory, and three months with the Eighth Chinese Route Army. "Last September China was very low," he said, "low in morale, food and supplies. But then came a $100,000,000 loan from the United States and the situation changed overnight."

"What China needs now are trained executives and technicians and equipment of all sorts."

1,000 Nazis RAF Strafes Reported at Foe Retreating Libyan Posts From Derna

Dive Bomber Pilots Are Among Group, Italian Reveals.

By LARRY ALLEN.

ABOARD A BRITISH WARSHIP AT TOBRUK, Libya, Jan. 29.—(P)—Approximately 1,000 German technicians and airmen now are stationed in Libya to aid the Italians against the British, an Italian prisoner said tonight.

The technicians represent the majority of Germans and the "German dive-bomber pilots have been raiding the British Army and fleet," he said.

This prisoner was one of thousands pouring into Tobruk to board British transports shuttling steadily between this captured Fascist port and Egyptian bases.

Many of these prisoners talked eagerly when they saw the American correspondent's insignia on my uniform.

One who said his father lived in New York said:

"The Australians are good men, but they were very rough with us."

The Fascist prisoners did not seem surprised when they were told the British estimated they had taken nearly 130,000 Italians since the push westward started from Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

Officers appeared confident here that thousands more would be captured in the operations against Derna, 95 miles west of here.

Enough war supplies have been seized, they said, to almost equip the entire British Army in Libya. British doctors said they found enough surgical dressings alone to last the Australians for a year.

Columns of Italian troops leaving areas west of Tobruk were caught in furious attacks by the Australians near Derna and are said to have surrendered in masses.

Reports received here say that 10,000 Italians have been taken in the British drive westward from Tobruk.

In Tobruk harbor is the wreckage of 17 Italian ships sunk or damaged by British bombing and British shelling, including the old cruiser San Giorgio and three destroyers whose masts stick up from the water.

Meanwhile, instructors drawn from the ranks of Villa Rica, CCC camp enrollees are conducting three classes for corps members only, said M. C. Ghesling, who is supervising.

RAF Strafes Foe Retreating From Derna

Italians Apparently Plan No Stand at Menaced Town.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 29.—(P)—

Royal Air Force planes leading the way for the British desert forces aimed at a cleanup of the Libyan port of Derna were reported by the RAF command today to have ground-strafed Fascist troops retreating all the way to Barca, 100 miles west of the menaced town.

Whittington, according to County Policemen Claud Webb and H. H. Jackson, was struck by an automobile driven by Forrest Adair III, of 137 West Wesley road. The officers reported Whittington apparently stepped suddenly into the path of Adair's car. Whittington was carried to the Crawford W. Long hospital.

With British mechanized forces reported operating south and west of Derna and threatening Italy's hold on all eastern Libya, the Fascist retreat indicated Mussolini's men apparently had decided against making a fight of it at Derna.

Instead, observers here believed the Italians would keep on past Barca and make a stand at Bengasi, 150 miles beyond Derna on the western side of the Cirenaican hump which juts into the Mediterranean.

On the landing field at Martuba, near Derna, RAF pilots said they found 11 Italian planes abandoned and unserviceable. Three others were spotted nearby, damaged in earlier machine-gunning and bombing attacks.

The air activity in Libya was but one phase of the latest RAF assaults, which included raids upon Italian outposts on two other American fronts and night attacks upon Naples, western Italian port, and Axis air bases on the island of Sicily.

Fires and explosions were reported started at Naples airdrome, the central railway junction and marshalling yards there. On Sicily, British pilots said they started fires and explosions at Catania airdrome, used as a base for German dive-bombers preying on Britain's Mediterranean shipping, and at near-by Comiso.

Hundreds of miles down in Africa, the middle east command reported, operations in the Agordat-Barentu sector of Italian Eritrea, about 80 miles from the Sudan border, were "developing."

BENGASI DECLARED GOAL OF BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(Thursday)—(P)—A military authority declared early today that the British army of the Nile was aiming in the "near future" at the capture of Bengasi, the westernmost Italian port holding on the "hump" of Libya.

He did not disclose how far the British forces had penetrated beyond besieged Derna.

1,500,000 Called By Great Britain

LONDON, Jan. 29.—(P)—Great Britain called men of 18 to 19 and 37 to 40 to the colors today and announced that future exceptions to military service would depend more on the actual job a man is doing than on his age or listed occupation.

Employers will be required to advise the labor ministry whether employees should be put on a list of "protected" work which will be defined in consultations with the supply services.

The call would add 1,500,000 to the 4,000,000 men already under arms, the United Press said.

Before the end of the war, it was predicted, there would not be a man working at a job a woman can do.

Britain's bachelor girls and retired shipbuilders probably will be among the first groups called up in the projected labor draft.

Both Greeks And Italians Launch Attacks

Athens Forces Said To Have Taken Several Heights.

BITOLJ, Yugoslavia (At the Albanian Frontier), Jan. 29.—(P)—Italian bayonet attacks on Greek positions in the Devol river valley and Greek assaults on Italian positions in the Skumbi river valley were reported tonight but the battlefield in Albania was said to be generally unaltered.

Positions changed several times in the Devol valley, with heavy losses on both sides. The Greeks, however, were said to hold several heights won in the last fighting of the day.

In the Skumbi valley the fighting was on the Greeks' initiative, but Italian artillery was said to have broken up their thrusts. There also losses were heavy on both sides, according to advice reaching the border.

The upper reaches of these two rivers are the principal sectors of the northernmost front in Albania, where the Greeks threaten Elbasani and Berat. The British air force was said to have bombed those places today.

Whittington, according to County Policemen Claud Webb and H. H. Jackson, was struck by an automobile driven by Forrest Adair III, of 137 West Wesley road. The officers reported Whittington apparently stepped suddenly into the path of Adair's car. Whittington was carried to the Crawford W. Long hospital.

Solicitor Drops Assault Charge Against Dentist

Charges of assault with intent to murder against Dr. C. A. Duncan, dentist, were ordered nolle prossed yesterday on payment of $11.75 cost involved in the indictment.

Dr. Duncan was accused of assaulting Henry Susky, newsboy, on November 17, 1940, with a monkey wrench. E. E. (Shorty) Andrews, assistant solicitor, said Susky made a statement that Dr. Duncan was suffering from a heart ailment and he might not stand the strain of a trial while he himself was responsible for the altercation which was climaxed by the assault.

Government Drops Goal To 25,000 Planes

Production Capacity of 2,200 Monthly Now Sought.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—(UP)—War Department experts have informed congressional defense leaders that the government virtually has abandoned its plan for accumulating 50,000 combat planes and is aiming instead at a peak of 25,000, with a production capacity of 2,200 monthly, it was disclosed tonight.

The information was given to defense spokesmen in congress as a gauge of the current preparedness effort. They were advised at the same time that if all goes well the defense production machine will attain peak efficiency by the early summer of 1942.

The 50,000-plane goal has been

Hitler Will Speak To Germans Today

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(Thursday)

(P)—The German press announced today that Adolf Hitler would speak to the people at 4:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Atlanta time) on the occasion of the anniversary of the Nazis' rise to power.

The address will be carried on the German radio.

Previously, spokesmen had said they knew of no plans for a Hitler speech.

sidetracked, the United Press informant said, because it would mean accumulating large stocks of craft which would be outmoded quickly.

The experts pointed out that planes produced only six months ago are being returned to the factories for installation of improvements developed by the European war.

6 Slain by Troops In Algerian Riots

MADRID, Jan. 29.—(P)—At least six persons were reported killed in riots involving soldiers in Algiers, capital of the French African protectorate of Algiers, dispatches from the Tangier (Morocco) international zone said tonight.

Soldiers were said to have broken out of the garrison, mortally wounding six persons. Some were rounded up but others were said to have made good their escape. They were being pursued.

It was recalled here that General Maxime Weygand, commander of the French colonial forces, in a speech yesterday said the protectorate was prepared for "any surprise" and referred to "exaggerated rumors" concerning the protectorate.

NASH

Proves its AMAZING ECONOMY!

LOS ANGELES (Jan. 19)—Today, when Gilmore-Grand Canyon Run results were officially published, it was revealed that the Nash Ambassador "600" had delivered more miles to the gallon than any other 6, 8, or 12-cylinder car in America's official economy race.

Scene of Nash victory . . . 599 miles of high speed travel . . . in desert heat, over mountain ranges.

NEVER before in Gilmore history had a car so big gone so far, so fast, on such little gasoline!

Thus was proved, in the acid test of competition, the amazing economy of America's new kind of car! But equally remarkable is the driver's own report of the run.

Even over rough stretches, this Nash floated along on its soft, four-wheel coil springs. And with its new Two-way Roller Steering it held the curves as though it were geared to rails.

It swept up the steepest grades effortlessly—with extra power always on hand in the Automatic Overtake.

High above the snow line, drivers were kept warm by its Weather Eye Conditioned Air System—the only feature of its kind in any lowest-price car.

You've got to see and drive this Nash yourself to know what it's like. It's an entirely new kind of car! Result of three years' testing, and an investment of many millions of dollars.

Built with its body and frame welded together as one twist-proof, rattle-proof unit of amazing strength—it has the greatest seating room of any car in the lowest-price field, with a Convertible

Bed in the rear—ideal for vacation trips.

Don't buy any new car this year until you see and compare this Nash. See how you, too, can get 25 to 30 miles a gallon, with average good driving.

When you discover the $70 to $100 a year it saves you—the extra things it does—and the extra fun it offers . . . you'll change your mind to Nash. Come on in today—and go for a Weather Eye ride in this new Nash!

Cooking Class Is Conducted By Sally Saver

West Fulton High P.-T. A. Discusses Problems With Editor.

A broiled steak dinner of a thick sirloin served with spiced onion rings, a casserole of carrots and celery and a pink and white grapefruit salad sprigged with mint was prepared at an informal cooking class yesterday by Miss Sally Saver, foods editor of The Constitution, held for the West Fulton High school P.-T. A.

From her portable kitchen, complete with the newest equipment, Miss Saver discussed buying and meal planning, and offered colorful Valentine food dishes, including a red pear salad stuffed with cottage cheese and currant jelly raisins.

Nearly 200 women attended the class, sponsored by The Constitution and one of a series held in various communities as an added service to readers who wish to discuss their food problems with Miss Saver personally.

Other dishes cooked by Miss Saver were Italian spaghetti, with a delicious sauce and served Italian style; baked sausage and hominy, and baked ham beautifully garnished.

All the dishes prepared by Miss Saver were distributed among the audience, as were ingredients donated by merchants.

Fairburn Seeks Sanitary Levy

An amendment to the city charter of Fairburn allowing the community to fix and collect a sanitary tax was introduced in the House of Representatives yesterday by the Fulton delegation.

The measure would allow the tax to be fixed by the mayor and council, and would require all persons in the city to make annual returns on all real and personal property, intangibles excepted. The mayor and council would be given power to appoint three freeholders each April as tax assessors, who would be able to penalize property holders 10 per cent for failure to make returns. Property owners dissatisfied at their assessment would have the right of appeal.

Morgenthau Urges Higher Debt Ceiling

Also Seeks Permission To Tax U. S. Issues and Borrow on Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Declaring that the treasury's borrowing power would be exhausted in four months, Secretary Morgenthau called on congress today to raise the federal debt limit from $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000 and to tap two new sources of cash.

He appeared before the house ways and means committee in support of a bill, which, in addition to raising the debt ceiling, would make future federal securities taxable and empower the treasury to issue small-denomination stamps or certificates so the government could borrow "from real savers" rather than from banks.

Although not describing these securities in detail, he said the bill would permit the treasury to issue small denomination savings bonds and savings certificates as well as the regular types of securities. Treasury officials previously had indicated consideration of $5 bonds and 25-cent savings stamps.

Morgenthau and his associates told the committee: 1. The increase in the debt limit would be devoted exclusively to defense projects and it should be adequate for the next two years; 2. New taxes should be levied for national defense; 3. Every administration for 20 years has recommended elimination of tax-exemptions on future federal securities and prompt congressional action is desirable; 4. All federal non-defense expenditures should be re-examined "with a magnifying glass" with a view to trimming them sharply.

Banquet Planned By Phi Delta Theta

The 70th annual initiation banquet of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity chapter at Emory university will be held at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the Piedmont Driving Club.

Principal speakers will be Frank S. Wright, province president for the fraternity and alumni secretary of the University of Florida, and Dr. Hayward J. Pierce Jr., of Brenau College.

Dr. Grady Clay, Atlanta oculist, will speak for the older alumni members of the chapter, and Bob Wiggins will speak for the younger alumni.

The banquet honors the order's new initiates and will be attended by 52 active members and 150 alumni.

Housing Grant For Hinesville Gets Approval

$350,000 Will Be Used To Construct 100 Dwelling Units.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has approved a $350,000 defense housing development for military and civilian personnel at Hinesville, Ga., center of the Army's anti-aircraft firing range. Representative Peterson, Democrat, Florida, said today. He said the development would consist of 100 dwelling units, and would be built under the supervision of the Public Buildings Administration.

Hinesville has been designated by the National Resources Planning Board as a "critical problem area."

Pastors Given Right To Waive Exempt Status

Theological Students Also Get Permission To Enter Service.

Ministers of the gospel and theology students can waive deferment from selective service and serve a year of military training if they so desire, according to a policy established yesterday by state draft headquarters.

Ministers and students for the ministry automatically are placed in a deferred group—Class IV-D—because of their religious profession.

At the same time, state headquarters announced a meeting of psychiatrists from the Four Corps Area for a discussion of plans to defer men who are likely to have severe mental or nervous breakdowns under army life or who are ill adapted to military training and may be more valuable in civilian capacities.

Dr. W. W. Young, medical advisory board psychiatrist for the fifth district, will be in charge of the meeting. Major Bennett G. Owens, state medical officer, will be a principal speaker, outlining the problems of psychiatry.

The meeting is expected to formulate some plan whereby early diagnosis will eliminate most of the unsuited men.

Sharp Tremor Lasting 10 Seconds Felt in Several Cities.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The metropolitan Los Angeles area was jolted late today by a sharp earthquake lasting about 10 seconds, but there was no property damage or loss of life reported.

The shock began at 5:34 p. m. (7:34 Atlanta time) and was felt in Alhambra, San Gabriel, Monterey, Glendale, Monterey Park, Temple City, Santa Monica, Pasadena, Hollywood, Arcadia and on the Los Angeles county coastline. Downtown Los Angeles experienced a severe jolt. Many residents in Alhambra, San Gabriel and Monterey Park ran into the streets.

39 Take Vow Of Citizenship In Court Here

'Must Make Democracy Work,' Underwood Tells Applicants.

A total of 39 persons became citizens of the United States yesterday at a hearing before Judge E. Marvin Underwood, of the northern district of Georgia, who told the new Americans "we must strive to make our democracy in actuality what it is in theory."

The new citizens represented France, Ecuador, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Mexico, Poland, Russia and Turkey. Great Britain led the list with 18 subjects becoming citizens.

House Votes Fund For Army Clothing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The house gave prompt approval today to a special $175,000,000 appropriation for long-range buying of Army clothing and equipment and then began debate on the session's first regular supply bill carrying $1,404,576,838 for "independent" government agencies.

Although $8,943,500 was lopped from budget estimates for the "independent" agencies by the house appropriations committee, the bill carried approximately $146,000,000 more than last year's appropriation for similar purposes.

Defense commission officials testified that unless the Army starts now to contract for next year's requirements, it will face "a serious shortage" of warm underwear for the troops next winter.

Britain Asked To Buy Cotton Needs in U.S.

American War Aid Cited by Council; Leaders Are Named.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 29.—(AP)—The National Cotton Council today asked Great Britain to make all its foreign cotton purchases in the United States.

Resolutions adopted at the closing session of its convention pointed out that Great Britain now is negotiating with Brazil and Peru for cotton, and asserted the council's belief that all should be bought here, since this nation is helping England supply its armies.

The council also called on state legislatures to abolish such trade barriers as taxes on oleomargarine and cottonseed products.

The congress was memorialized to repeal existing laws prohibiting federal agencies from purchasing margarine.

All directors, with the exception of two, one who resigned and the other who retired, were re-elected.

The 1941 board includes:

Producer representatives—L. W. Frick, of Bakersfield, Cal.; George Chance, Bryan, Texas; Wyndham Manning, Sumter, S. C.; Boswell Stevens, Macon, Miss.; and N. C. Williamson, Lake Providence, Louisiana.

Gin representatives—Harry S. Baker, of Fresno, Cal.; Joseph F. Kohn, Hayti, Miss.; Garner M. Lester, Jackson, Miss.; C. D. Patterson, Decatur, Ala.; and J. C. Thompson, Dallas, Texas.

Warehouse representatives—B. L. Anderson, Fort Worth, Texas; Dupuy Bateman Jr., Atlanta; C. A. Bertel, New Orleans; E. W. Brooks, Memphis, and F. M. Hayner, Las Cruces, N. M.

Crusher representatives—W. B. Coberly, Los Angeles; A. L. Durand, Robert, Okla.; W. F. Guinee, New Orleans; H. E. McMath, Americus, Ga.; and H. G. Womble, Caldwell, Texas.

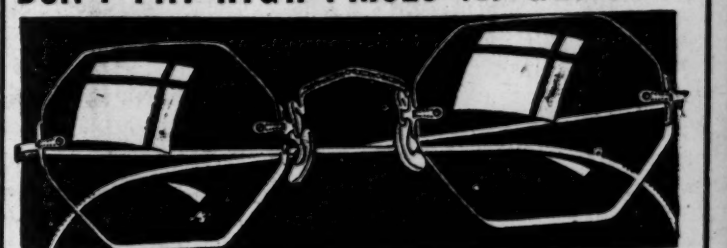

Merchant representatives—L. T. Barringer, Memphis; Everett R. Cook, Memphis; D. N. Gilbert, Greensboro, N. C.; Burris C. Jackson, Hillsboro, Texas; and W. F. Baker, Phoenix, Ariz.

This board met late today and re-elected Oscar Johnston, Scott, Miss., president; Robert R. Coker, Hartsville, S. C.; Lamar Fleming Jr., Houston, and Harold A. Young, North Little Rock, Ark., vice presidents; William T. Wynn, Greenville, Miss., treasurer, and William Rhea Blake, Memphis, executive secretary.

Opportunity—and Danger

The budget control bill, passed by the Georgia house of representatives and now awaiting action by the senate, presents to Governor Talmadge one of the greatest opportunities for service to the state which has ever been given a Georgia Governor.

At the same time there can be no question that the bill contains within itself another possibility, one which could, in the hands of an unscrupulous executive, do untold harm to the state.

It will be, after final enactment of the measure, which now seems foregone, strictly up to the Governor. According to how he uses the powers granted under the measure he will go into history either as the greatest Governor of many years, or as a man who sacrificed his honor and his state on the altar of selfish ambition.

Properly used, the powers granted by the bill will enable the Governor to literally lift Georgia out of a morass of debt by the bootstraps. Improperly used, those same powers could wreck the state's organization and make of the Governor a virtual dictator.

For the bill gives him complete control of the state finances. Under it he can give to any department what money he sees fit, or he can withhold all, or any part of, that department's financial support, as he wishes. He could, thus, eliminate completely any state activity which he did not approve, thus abrogating the act of the legislature in creating that activity.

In granting the power to place surplus funds from any department in the emergency fund, thus making the money available for any state use, the measure confers an opportunity for payment of state obligations and for disentanglement of financial problems that face many departments today.

Only time will tell the wisdom of the legislation. It will either be the greatest thing Georgia ever did, or the very names of those who sponsored it will become anathema on the lips of Georgians of the future.

And the sole responsibility as to whether it shall be blessing or curse to the state, rests upon Governor Talmadge. He can make of himself a public benefactor or another Huey Long.

Unless he is permitted to leave Spain, Carol of Rumania threatens to go on a hunger strike, the facilities of which are understood to be excellent in Spain.

War Changes

The extent to which war can change the routine habits of people and industry has seldom been better demonstrated than by the revelation that defense industries should change normal electric wiring arrangements to a "network grid" system, the use of which localizes possible bomb damage.

According to Charles A. Powell, Westinghouse official who has inspected German factories in recent years, all newer factories in that country have been equipped with the "grid" system. Under this system bombs striking in one section of a plant will damage only the electric connections in that section. Under systems now used in American plants, a radial arrangement, such bomb damage would affect the entire plant, when one or more lines is put out of commission.

The "grid" arrangement is similar to that used by many power companies. Should a main line through Atlanta be damaged, as an example, power could be brought to the affected area through other lines. The same would operate in a factory so equipped.

This is but one example of the manner in which war affects the normal ways of life. We in America will learn more and more—more than we thought possible—in the months to come.

The youth who spent ten hours in the dentist's chair to win admission to the army will please call for his uniform and medal.

son. First, the beloved composer is elected to the Hall of Fame. Then he rescued radio from ASCAP.

Remember the Day

Today is the birthday of President Roosevelt.

It is, too, the day of the annual campaign to raise funds for the war against infantile paralysis.

There is no one in Atlanta, in Georgia, who will not be granted the opportunity, today, to contribute to this fund. The gifts may be small—a dime—or they may be large, according to the capacity of the giver. Whatever they are, they are all welcome and all go to the same great cause.

There will be parties of all types, in every city, town and village. All proceeds will go to the fund. In Atlanta a half-dozen dances will be held, with special floor entertainment. If you can, go to one or more of these dances and let your tickets help swell the total collected.

There will be buttons on sale on the streets, for whatever you can give. Buy a button and wear it to the dance, but buy a button, anyway.

Half of the fund collected in Fulton county remains here, to help local victims of the dread malady. This is true of every county in the United States. The other half of the fund goes to institutions which are patiently and devotedly carrying on research, seeking the best cure for the disease, its cause and a means of prevention.

Someday infantile paralysis, polio, will be eliminated from the ills to which mankind is heir. Like the plague, smallpox and other diseases practically extinct today, there will be no more polio. But the only way this blessed consummation can be reached, is by liberal support of the work now going on through the national polio foundation.

And that support can come only through your dimes, your dollars, given annually on this one day of the year when the appeal is made, January 30, The President's birthday.

Remember—today is the day.

We know of nothing more confusing than two voices in the wilderness.

Making Progress

The extent to which the United States has progressed in its preparedness in comparison to progress in World War days is indicated in the announcement that 350,000 men will participate in war games in the southern states this year. This will involve more men than were in the entire army only a few months ago and will be five times greater than last year's maneuvers—then the largest ever held in peace times. Also highlighting this progress is the statement that the selective service will have 800,000 men undergoing training by early summer, with the draft process to be speeded up considerably as new camps are completed.

Meanwhile, other reports show the equipment required by the American—and British—army will be shored along far ahead of schedule. For example, steel work has already been completed at the new Chrysler tank plant and at the Ford plant being constructed for the manufacture of airplane engines.

Against these optimistic reports must be placed the statement of OPM executives that more than 50 per cent of the nation's mechanical equipment is either idle or in use only eight hours a day and that defense orders have gone to only 13,000 contractors when 200,000 firms are available. The solution to this bottleneck, OPM leaders say, rests in new plans to spread defense work through smaller industries by encouraging large companies to sublet the maximum quantity possible to the smaller units. Only in this way, it is said, can maximum production be obtained in a short period of time. In addition, this subcontracting should prevent all but necessary overexpansion of plant facilities and in turn lighten the economic readjustments in the aftermath of the conflict.

All in all, progress has been great—much greater than during a similar period of the World War after this nation entered the conflict. But mere progress is not enough. It must be the ultimate progress obtainable whether that progress is obtained in normal ways or by temporary shifts in that procedure. Only then will America be satisfied.

LABOR, STRIKES AND DEFENSE

Although labor continues to be the problem child of the defense program, the "work or be drafted" rule out in California is decidedly not the answer to strikes in defense industries," argues the ST. PAUL DISPATCH, which points out that the best rule could do "would be to send to the Army men who would be more valuable to the defense of the country in their jobs." At the same time, the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE declares, "President Wilson's World War words, 'work or fight,' were not in any sense directed at labor, and 'there was no justification' for quoting them 'in connection with the threatened strike at the Ryan aircraft plant at San Diego.'" The CHRONICLE adds, "The rule of reason on both sides still holds and workers and employers still have a full right to have their issues settled by negotiation on a rational basis."

While the "ruling that conscription cannot be used to prevent strikes" is "From the standpoint of labor and American freedom" a "sound opinion . . . it can hardly be regarded as justice by the men forced into training camps," says the MIAMI HERALD, which holds that "The drafted men must serve out their time whether they like it or not; whether their pay is high or low, or their quarters comfortable. But the organized worker, excused from service, may do as he pleases."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

EXCHANGE OF HOSTAGES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Edward R. Stettinius has named Isador Lubin labor adviser of the priorities division of the defense organization, and John Biggers will probably soon request Philip Murray and William Green to serve on the production division's planning control board. After William S. Knudsen, Stettinius and Biggers are the two most important businessmen concerned in the defense effort. Lubin is the most influential individual in Sidney Hillman's defense labor group, and the positions of the CIO and AFL chieftains do not need to be underlined.

What needs underlining is the significance of this sudden fraternizing between labor and industrial leaders. In recent months the defense organization has been increasingly afflicted by a schism between the businessmen on one hand and the labor representatives and New Dealers on the other. When the President vested responsibility for defense production in the Office of Production Management, and gave joint control of OPM to Knudsen and Hillman, the schism appeared unbridgeable. The President's order was issued after a sordid squabble between the two factions. It left each thoroughly mistrustful of the other. The squabble might have been avoided had Hillman been in Washington to confer at the time with Knudsen, with whom he gets on well. As it happened, Hillman was in Baltimore, ill at Johns Hopkins hospital. Fortunately, after issuance of the order, Knudsen and Biggers visited Hillman at the hospital and had a long, frank talk with him. It was then decided to repair the results of the squabble, so far as possible, by what might be described as an exchange of hostages between the warring factions.

FINGERS IN THE PIE

The point at issue between the factions was the point always at issue in guerrilla outbreaks in the government—who was to be boss? The exchange of hostages means, in effect, that the labor people and New Dealers are to have fingers in the businessmen's pie, and that the businessmen are to be allowed to give an occasional touch to the pie of labor.

Stettinius' priorities division and Biggers' production division—the two key units in the defense setup—are to have more than mere labor advice. Besides Lubin as general adviser, Stettinius will also have a special labor adviser for each of his division's five subsections. Thus labor will have a voice in the formulation of many highly controversial policies. In the steel business, for example, the manufacturers have steadfastly opposed large expansion on the ground that, with the limitation of reasonable priorities, steel capacity is great enough to meet all needs. The New Dealers have fought hard for expansion, and labor, naturally interested in new jobs, has demanded a say in the matter. Now the say has been granted.

Then, in Biggers' production division, besides Green and Murray or their substitutes on the planning control board, labor advisers may also be appointed to work with Biggers' chief assistants. The definite action of Green and Murray has been delayed by a curious situation. Because of the bad relations between him and John Lewis, Hillman was unable to consult the CIO on his defense organization work. Because he could not consult the CIO, he was debarred from consulting the AFL either. Lewis' retirement from the CIO in Murray's favor removed the difficulty, but Hillman was taken ill soon thereafter and because he had not talked to them himself, he did not wish Biggers to be the first man from the defense setup to make overtures to the AFL and CIO leaders. Nothing seems to remain to be straightened out, however, but the protocol of the situation.

On the labor side, Hillman has long had one leading businessman, E. D. Bransome, of the Vanadium Corporation, among his aides. Possibly others will be recruited to meet the terms of the new truce.

RUBE GOLDBERG DREAM

The truce was made after much sound and fury. Shortly after the President established the OPM the business group settled among themselves that Frederick Eaton, a corporation lawyer acting as Knudsen's counsel, should be OPM secretary, and that Roy Jackson, a United States Steel official in Stettinius' crowd, should be administrative officer. Both men were anathema to the New Dealers and labor people, and Hillman's subordinates complained that they were being ignored. The complaints, as it happened, were not correct, since Biggers and Knudsen had obtained Hillman's approval of the Eaton and Jackson appointments on their visit to Baltimore. And now Jackson has exhibited a sort of symbolic fairness by giving Hillman offices centrally located between Knudsen's and Stettinius' in the OPM new quarters in the Social Security building.

Knudsen is going to Baltimore regularly to see Hillman and the relation between the two men is as good as ever. The relations between their henchmen are currently improving. A modus vivendi has been found. But the trouble preceding the discovery of the modus vivendi, and the nature of the arrangement itself, both illustrate another major defense problem which has not been solved at all.

Every special interest, economic, political and bureaucratic, has demanded its share in the defense work. Instead of telling all the special interests to go to the devil, the President has always tried to compromise between them. Thus the businessmen and labor people have to be elaborately reconciled, and machinery for constant and time-wasting consultation has to be set up. Thus the claims of no department are ever passed over and jobs which should be done by one man are split between half a dozen government agencies. Thus, in short, the defense mechanism at times approximates a Rube Goldberg dream. And, until this organizational or mechanical problem has been boldly tackled, only good luck will give us adequate defense production.

A Letter From Lady Reading.

While she was on an errand of mercy to bomb-wrecked Coventry, the London home of the Marchioness of Reading, chairman of the Women's Voluntary Services, was blasted in an air raid, and a time-bomb dropped close by, she disclosed in a letter received recently by Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross.

"I returned to find my house had been rather badly 'blasted' while I was away," Lady Reading writes, "and as the enemy decided to make matters worse by dropping a time-bomb close by, my house and belongings are out of bounds. Time bombs are difficult to locate, as they are so constructed that they dive deep into the ground without breaking up the surrounding surface. The small amount of earth displaced falls in and fills up the hole made by the bomb and only a little pile of loose earth shows on top. They are sinister things. Very often though, the air raid wardens know when one has fallen and the general direction it has taken. It may take some hours to locate the bomb."

"In the case of 'my bomb,' the maids slept through the rest of the night in the house unaware of the danger, but the next morning when the bomb was discovered, they were hauled out without a chance of changing their clothes or salvaging anything except my cats. The maids are none the worse for their adventure, however, and quite ready to go back and help clear up the mess as soon as the 'suicide squad' have finished their work. It takes them some time as the squad have to work with their hands or the lightest of tools in case of accidents."

Coventry On Feet Again.

Describing conditions she found in Coventry and Birmingham, following the intense air raids in early December, Lady Reading wrote: "The enemy has changed his bombing tactics slightly during the last few weeks and, instead of concentrating on London, makes a big drive in certain industrial towns or one or two of the most important ports. You will have heard of the shattering blow on Coventry about a fortnight ago and also of the heavy raids on Birmingham, a much bigger city. Although the extent of the Coventry raid was not greater than anything we have had in London, it appeared to be more paralyzing because it was concentrated on a much smaller area. The first few days were a nightmare of high-speed activity to the relief workers, but they pulled through, and now only two weeks afterwards, the city is at least on its feet again, a little shaky, but functioning. Transport and postal services are almost normal, food and coal are plentiful, partial services are available, but gas is restricted to public services. Hundreds of homes have been made habitable by all manner of improvisations. Although hundreds of shops were wrecked in the center of the city, many of them have re-opened temporarily in huddle sheds built of asbestos sheeting. Even cinemas are opening. No one in the city is short of good hot food. I have just returned from a week in the region and investigated conditions very thoroughly, and I am satisfied that this is true. The first SOS I received from Coventry was for warm clothing for the homeless. Needless to say the American Red Cross station wagons were on their way in next to no time, loaded to the top with supplies.

Grateful for U. S. Assistance.
"It is very thrilling to realize as one goes round the country the extent to which people are beginning to be really conscious of the assistance coming from America. We have now got 1,660 branches, any of which can come into operation at any moment, and so the stocking of these different centers has as you can imagine been a very difficult thing to do from the point of view of the number of supplies needed."

"One of the W. V. S. mobile canteens at Worcester, some miles away, was actually the first relief canteen to arrive in Coventry and in fact arrived before the terrible bombing had finished, as it was called up at 3 a. m. and arrived at half-past six in the morning, completely stocked and staffed, and arrangements made for relays of supplies to be sent in throughout the day. It operated in the main square of the city. A real front-line job."

"In Birmingham there was an acute shortage of babies' bottles for homeless babies collected in the rest shelters, so I sent an SOS to headquarters for supplies of American bottles to be sent up at

Sweetest Graft

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. I am going to tell you some more about the union racket which is shaking down the poor pick-and-shovel stiffs in the great national effort to spread freedom everywhere, on which President Roosevelt vowed that nobody would be allowed to profiteer. The pick-and-shovel shakedown is the Hod-Carriers' and Common Laborers' Union, and it is the sweetest graft of all, because the boys just go along quietly and systematically, never holding elections or conventions but always collecting the money, and whenever you try to get in touch with them they are away. It is like trying to nail a plank on a cloud of smoke to investigate the Hod-Carriers' and Common Laborers' racket. You know it is there, but when you try to touch it, it ain't.

This union now claims 250,000 members. That much I did get from the woman who answered the phone in Washington, where the headquarters were established last April after many years in Quincy, Mass.

Joe Moreschi, the boss, or international president, explained to the local chamber of commerce in Quincy that he was moving the business to Washington be closer to the public pulse—obviously a misprint for "pulse," inasmuch as his boys have been extorting from $25 to $50 per head from American citizens desiring to own a new spread of soil in the building of cantonments, power plants and the like.

The boss, however, is not in Washington, and neither is the secretary, Achilles Persson. They are out of town, and will be gone for a month.

Down

In Miami

Guess where they are? Ou' in the snow heaunting their loyal followers as they chip the frozen soil with picks to earn a few eating-bucks for their families? You know better than that. Mr. Moreschi and Mr. Persson are down in Miami, the hibernating place of the criminal scum and the racketeers of the AFL, to confer with themselves on solemn affairs of labor with a capital L, in a series of deliberations which will include an accredited representative of the Chicago underworld.

You would think that a big international union of the AFL would leave some imprint, if only a scar, on a city the size of Quincy after 20-odd years of official residence there. The teamsters and carpenters are pretty important in Indianapolis, for instance. But in Quincy, Mass., the pick-and-shovel racket was very aloof. Mr. Moreschi was generally "out" or "away," and the local people know little about him or his union, except that the union did build a three-story edifice for its headquarters.

He became president after the death of Dominick D'Allesandro in 1926, and "became president" is about as good a term as can be used to describe the process. The rank and file were not consulted, nor has their opinion been asked on any question since the last convention in 1911. Moreschi "became president" and president he remains, and nowadays, according to the claim of his own office in Washington, his central treasury draws tribute from a 250,000 American workmen—some of them willing suckers, of course, but others victim of plain extortion.

35 Cents

A Month

At the rate of 35 cents per month, which was the same graft that was extorted from the building service workers by George Scallies, that would yield $1,050,000 a year to the international treasury, and we don't know how many years this graft has been rolling in or what has been done with any of it beyond paying the salaries of about 20 office hands at headquarters and a miserable little death benefit ranging from $50 to $200.

This union is so rotten that even the gorillas of the movie employees' racket may look with envy and admiration on the larcenous effrontery of the racketeers who run both the international and the dirty little shakedown locals which carry the message of organized labor down to the pick-and-shovel stiffs. But the other AFL construction unions, which collaborate with it and give it aid and comfort by their standing agreements to strike jobs struck by the common laborers, are only a little less guilty.

Horse Comeback.

Horses and mules will return to favor in South Africa if the government accedes to the request of the South African Agricultural Union that it determine the best way this may be accomplished. South Africa has no oil supplies nor factories producing farm implements and tractors, and farmers declare the animals could supply farm power in post-war depression times, thus saving the expenditure of $40,000,000 a year abroad.

once—also by one of the station wagons. You can have no conception of the joy the wagons are to us. They are in constant use—always on some errand of mercy."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

MR. WILLKIE'S NEW PARTY

Mr. Wendell Willkie is in London having the time of his life, seeing the greatest show the modern world has produced. Before leaving for England he dramatized himself by urging further support of the President and the President's foreign policy.

This left the Republican party organization writhing in great pain. He already has broken with the man who helped make him the Republican nominee—Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas. Landon's foreign policy is directly opposed to that of Willkie, who goes along with the President. He has created extreme anguish in the ranks of the old-liners of his party.

Willkie is going to come back an even more ardent advocate of all-out aid to England. His former Republican friends, who never liked him anyhow, are saying, in ironic anger, that Willkie, who deserted the Democratic party for the Republican, now is out working for the Democratic nomination in 1944.

If there are those who are interested and who care to go along with us for a while, I think it may be pointed out that we are seeing the wreck and ruin of the old-line Republican party. There is no telling. The war may change things. But I think if the war does change things it will change it along the line things now are going. And, if so, then the Republican party of tradition and history is done for and even now may be carted off to the storeroom of political history.

The fellow whom it took to its bosom, and whom the old-liners now say was a viper in their political bosom, has done them in.

ANOTHER BRYAN

It was William Jennings Bryan who did something of the sort to the Democratic party. The Democrats, of course, rarely have been committed to the theory of special privilege and government for the few as had the Republicans. But it was the silver-tongued Bryan who split the Democratic party and caused it to be rebuilt along more generous and more liberal lines.

It was Bryan, then a tall young congressman from Nebraska, who in 1893 revolted against Grover Cleveland, the Democratic President. He kept up the revolt. It was Bryan, as much as another man, who brought about passage of the first income tax law. One of his statements was much quoted:

"The gentleman from New York," exclaimed Bryan, "said that the poor are opposed to this tax because they do not want to be deprived of participation in it (there were exemptions in the lower brackets), and that taxation, instead of being a sign of servitude is a pledge of freedom. If taxation is a pledge of freedom, let me assure you, my friends, that the poor people of this country are covered all over with the insignia of free men."

(The speeches of Bryan would serve as excellent sources of phrases and comments by the modern politician.)

That income tax law was reversed by the courts and it was not until after a constitutional amendment that this tax was established. Bryan said of the party, in that great fight which set anew the course of the party: "The sympathies of the Democratic party are ever on the side of the struggling masses who have ever been the foundation of the Democratic party."

He fought to rescue the Democratic party from the grip of the interests which were stifling it. And while he never himself won the nomination he did defeat these groups in the famous convention which, on the 46th ballot, nominated the Princeton schoolmaster, Woodrow Wilson, a progressive.

WILLKIE'S INFLUENCE

It was Bryan who put the Democratic party back where it belonged—on the side of the people.

And today it is Willkie who has done to death the old-line Republican party. He cut the roots and it is dying at the top and does not yet realize it. Willkie is creating a new Republican party, one which will recognize its obligation to the people.

The Republican politicians feared him at their Philadelphia convention but took him because they had no one else. They looked about and saw only the face of Herbert Hoover as another choice. And anything, even Willkie, was better than that. They hate him now, many of them. Many of those who were his loudest champions now are saying, "Well, I am disappointed in him. I'm glad he was not elected."

Willkie, however, has their party. They must soon discover that. They do not hate him, though, as the Democrats hated Bryan. When he arose with the resolution which barred the "Wall Street delegates" from that convention which nominated Wilson.

Bryan had great courage in that fight. Some of the delegates tried to assault him. One man stood and screamed he would give $25,000 to anyone who would assassinate Bryan. Others shouted to hang him. One man rushed to the platform and shouted and shook his fists at Bryan until he had a convulsion and was taken away, frothing at the mouth.

Bryan rescued the Democratic party and re-made it into the progressive party pledged to the interests of the people. Willkie will take away the remaining strength of the Republican party and make a new one of it. He is to that party what Bryan was to the Democratic party of the Bryan era.

The G. O. P. of Careful Cal and of Hoover and of Harding is no more.

The People In the Palace Are Helpless When the Guardsmen Refuse To Guard

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

It is all very well to say we shouldn't cry over spilled milk, and it seems sound and sane philosophy; but if nobody cares enough to weep, who will take the precautions necessary to prevent further spilling?

Every patriot who understands our present plight must feel like weeping or cursing in helpless rage as he contemplates the record of official ineptitude and failure that denied us even so much as a third-rate air force.

Second-best planes are not weapons; they are mere targets and death-traps.

And our combat planes, compared with England's and Germany's, are a poor and pathetic third—not merely in numbers, but in design and fighting efficiency.

The English flatter us by telling of the good work done by the planes we send them, but those planes are not used until they are rebuilt and protected by armor and equipped with extra guns, and this additional weight reduces their speed and thus their ability to survive in a flight.

Hitler mobilized Germany's most brilliant engineers and scientists and gave them authority to use all of the nation's resources to build the best plane they could produce.

England tardily did the same thing—and did it better. And our private industries, with their wonderful research and experimental departments, could have done as well as England if given the opportunity and incentive. Why doubt it, when they steadily and almost miraculously improve everything else they build?

It was officialdom that failed. Our navy first experimented with the dive bomber, and then apparently lost interest while Germany developed it into a weapon that terrified the world.

Our people first used makeshift armor for combat planes, and then dropped the idea while Germany developed it to make her planes the safest in the world.

Even though no war was expected, one would think that professional pride would have prompted our people to keep experimenting and improving until they had the best plane in the world. But they were content to move in a rut—each obeying orders and carefully doing nothing more.

Now we are still making planes that couldn't survive a fight with the best. Does anybody know why? Private citizens can only worry and weep; for when officials cling to error, only disaster can correct it.

Mr. Reeves Voices A Plea for Peace In Music World.

I'll be very much contented and a little less demented when the radio and publishers agree to come to terms; for my worn-out set is sweating with the music I am getting just because there is an argument between these well-known firms.

All our hours, asleep or waking, some catarrhal tenor's taking Kathleen to home in Ireland or some place across the sea. And if Jeannie with her flowing, light brown hair should soon be going, I'll not raise a hand to stop her; it will be O. K. with me.

Though I do not care for smell, be it purple, green or yellow, and I much prefer my coffee with its content of caffeine, and the enterprising packer who distributes my tobacco, might as well be told I want it with the good old nicotine—I can take the advertising of these sponsors, enterprising; I can listen to their golden-voiced announcers throw their line, and although I love the singing which made a grand start to swinging, I would like ONE song composed since eighteen hundred forty-nine.

OLLIE REEVES.

"Call WZ-7832."

Something that exhausts my patience and leaves my soul bare and quivering like a half-slaughtered bullfrog is waiting on a telephone call. Or waiting for anything.

It is rarely I set in motion the series of obstacles, embarrassments, disappointments and clutter-up-meantime incidents—the magic of talking to a man over a wire.

The other fellow always starts it. I find on my desk a memo: "Call WZ-7832."

Think as furiously as I may I can't remember anybody at that number. My first inclination is to say: "Oh—." And forget it.

But I can't forget it. It haunts me. It might—probably won't—be a man who desires to hand me a publicity job, on the side, which will enable me to buy two new tires and thus dare a trip outside the city limits.

It might be a woman who has a precocious daughter in Junior High who wants me to write a piece for her school paper. In that case—

But sooner or later, after pacing the floor like a caged hyena, I call up that number.

The girl on the switchboard at the other end asks who or whom, depending upon her cultural background—I desire to reach.

I explain that I have no idea. I found that number with a request to call.

"Would it be Mr. Smith?" she inquires.

"What Mr. Smith?" I respond, because I know several Smiths.

"How should I know?" she counterpoints. "We have three. One of them is the porter, but he's colored."

I endeavor to explain that I am merely trying to please. That I have no idea whether I'm addressing the United States government or a second-hand clothing store. All I know is that I was asked to call this number.

"Call You Back."

"Well," says the feminine person at the other end—and I can hear her chewing gum smack—"I'll check up on it and have him call you back."

"Fine," I agree. "I'll be right here."

I sit. And wait. There is work I should do, but this sits heavily upon my mind.

Lunch time approaches. I am hungry. But I hate to walk out and miss that call. They say Opportunity knocks but once.

I grow hungrier and hungrier. I'd send the boy out for a glass of milk and a slab of apple pie, but he is stuck at home with the flu.

Finally, I give up. I get into my overcoat and hat and press the button for the elevator.

Then here comes a call. "You're wanted on the phone."

So, at long last, here it is: "Is this Mr. Glass? Well, that is fine. I read everything you write, Mr. Glass. I think it is swell. Mr. Glass, I note in your valuable column, which my wife reads to me every morning at breakfast, that you have had trouble with your radio. Now, if you will come around to my place, I will show you a radio—"

At this juncture I interrupt. "Would you care to take me to luncheon—a really good luncheon, because I'm as hungry as a lady wolf with three cubs after a hard winter—where we could talk this problem over?"

There is a pause—possibly for station announcement.

"Well, not today, Mr. Glass," says the voice. Whether it is or is not one of the three Smiths I shall never know. "I have been to lunch and I have three customers waiting. Perhaps I shall call you again."

Another mid-day gone to hades. And still no lunch!

Good Morning

By Dr. Louie D. Newton.

The Presbyterian Poplar. Do you know what it is? Every Georgian should know what the phrase "The Presbyterian Poplar" signifies. Let me see if I can tell you, briefly. And I might say just here that my interest in the Presbyterian Poplar has been deepened through the fact that L. F. Alford came by my study one day last fall and brought me a gavel, made by another good friend, Mack Bentley, on which is inscribed these words: "First Presbyterian Church, Washington, Georgia, 1790." The gavel is made from a piece of limb, as I understand it, from the famous tree.

In 1790 the Presbyterian church at Washington was constituted, and on July 22, that year, Rev. Robert Hall and Rev. Francis Cummins, of the South Carolina Presbyterian synod, came to Washington and ordained Rev. John Springer under a poplar tree, no meeting house having yet been erected. Mr. Springer was the first person in Georgia to be ordained to the ministry in the Presbyterian faith. And he was the first pastor of the Presbyterian church in Washington. That tree, the Presbyterian Poplar, still stands, and the ground on which it stands is owned by the daughter of the late Captain Charles A. Alexander.

Last October the Georgia synod met in Washington, and observed the 150th anniversary of the historic Presbyterian church at Washington. During the session of the synod last October they re-enacted the ordination of Mr. Springer under the poplar tree, now so famous.

The tree stands about 500 yards north of the junction of the Elberton highway and Robert Toombs avenue. At the meeting of the synod last October a beautiful granite marker was dedicated on the highway, near the tree. Another marker was dedicated at the grave of Mr. Springer, some four miles from Washington. Both

WOULD RUN APPEASERS OUT OF UNITED STATES

Editor Constitution: What is the matter with our law makers in Washington? I see they have a Nazi appeaser telling them what is best for this country to do. In stead of letting him talk like he does, he should be wrapped up in a Nazi flag and sent to his chum, Hitler, and never be allowed to put his foot in this U. S. A. again. Hitler might make him a "colonel" in the German Army.

The sooner this country gets rid of his kind the better off all of us will be. Maybe Hitler has promised him a job to run this country, when the Axis lick up.

Hurrah for the good old U. S. A. "Run all the appeasers out."

Theater Boycott Ended by Students

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Jan. 29. A boycott of the Campus theater here by Georgia State College for Women and Georgia Military College students in protest to the transfer of Mrs. F. D. Adams, manager, was ended today.

The boycott, put into effect by the students Friday, was ended at G. M. C. when Cadet Lieutenant James (Goat) Helton, who led the drive for its enactment, announced it had been discontinued.

No official action has yet been taken by the College Government Association at G. S. C. W., but students said they presumed the boycott at their school ended simultaneously with the G. M. C. move.

Women Voters Favor Manager Rule for City

Group Hears Address by Mayor LeCraw at Annual Meeting.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters in their annual meeting yesterday planned a program to back the manager form of government under a nonpolitical board. They resolved to further classify jobs and standardize salaries for Atlanta employees; to support the City Personnel Department, and to extend the present civil service system to the police and fire departments. Unlike their programs of other years, this slate carries no particular emphasis on separate issue. It is to be a program of service and support.

Mayor Roy LeCraw, in an address at the luncheon session, lauded the plans for support of civil service but warned the women that they had much further to go.

"Civil service is a broad term," he pointed out, "and it can do much good and much harm, according to the way it is drawn and administered. If it is properly drawn and exercised much good may be rendered, if not it may have just as harmful effect in the opposite direction."

Encourages League.

He encouraged the women to promote a more even distribution of funds among the three groups of civil service workers in the city's employ. The three groups, the upper of which is composed of one-third of the civil service employees, and the lower of 103 persons receiving salaries of less than $75 per month, are not correctly financed, he pointed out. Thus he urged the members to promote their civil service campaign, but to carry it into the most remote sections of the city government, whittling off the salaries of the upper one-third and paying the lower 103 sufficient money for their living expenses.

The program adopted by the league consists of two other mafor factors. The first is concerned with primaries and elections, the second with registration. They want to elect Atlanta officials in odd years, to promote secret ballot, to hold no primary in Fulton county before September 1 and to enforce preferential count in the primaries. According to the organization, election of city officials in odd years and county and state officials in even years would eliminate much confusion to the voter. The number has been removed from the city primary ballot, but remains on all others.

Would Abolish Board.

Their aim is to abolish the Board of Registrars and to centralize their power and authority in the tax collector's office, to complete new registration in 1941 and then to start a new system, to register on duplicate cards one set of which will be used at the polls, and to purge the voters' list every two years of the names of persons who have not voted for that period.

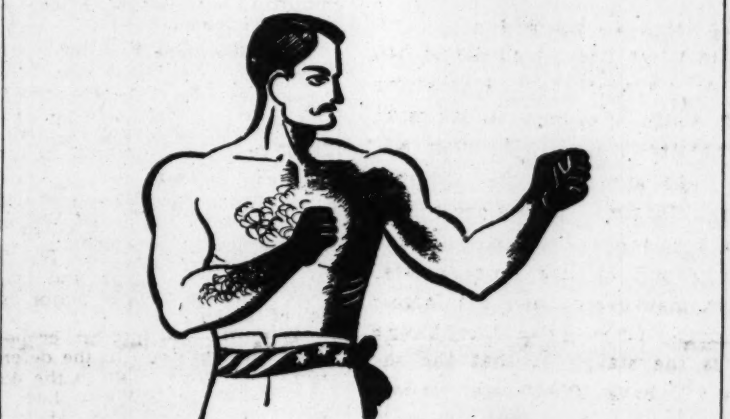

The program also engrosses consideration of the one unit form of government for Atlanta and Fulton county. This is the ultimate goal of the organization because, it is said, such a system would result in a more efficient and a more economical government for all the citizens of this area, most of whom know no political boundaries.

They plan to back the manager principle, to promote for the first time this year the idea of pensions for city and county employees, to encourage the betterment of public health, education, recreation, and public welfare. They also discussed the Democratic executive committee, the short ballot for Atlanta and Fulton county, and a solution of the metropolitan traffic problem on sound, scientific engineering principles.

Nazis To Drive Toward South, Rumania Told

Pro-German Papers Call for One-Year Truce Within Nation.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Rumania was warned today by her pro-German newspapers to declare immediately a one-year truce upon all ideological conflicts "because of the international situation."

One article, speaking of reports of intensified Soviet Russian armament, declared "we cannot afford experiences at home when there are signs of a storm in the neighborhood," even though "we do not know in which direction it will rage."

Another article predicted that "the motorized German army will sweep through the Balkan peninsula like a hurricane within a short time to deliver a blow so crushing that the enemy will never recover its sense."

Both of these were written by Rome by Paul Scharu, Balkan editor who is reputed to have close Axis connections.

Life in London Flat Described By Ex-Atlantan

noisy and occasionally you could feel the shake of bombs.

Planes were coming over about one minute and as the bombs began to come more frequently, we discussed going to the shelter. This argument always takes place on bad nights. And it always ends the same way. We figure the statistics—that buildings only cover about a seventh of London's total area and therefore only one of seven bombs is going to hit a building. There are only four sides and a roof to your building, so only one out of five that hit it would be apt to concern you.

Therefore, we always decide it's better to take your chances and be comfortable in the privacy of your own flat than a little safer and less comfortable in the shelter.

Concentration Hard.

It was getting difficult to concentrate on reading and my book suddenly didn't seem very interesting anyway, so we moved back from the living room with its span of window glass into a little hall and began to play cards. Half a dozen times we heard the whistle that means one is falling near and three times we heard that crashing, crumpling sound we'd learned from unhappy experience meant your own or a neighboring building was getting smashed. There was one terrific slam and shake once and then the sound of many fire engines and ambulances—we live near a first aid post. We heard some softer plops and the noise of running feet in the hall. A maid popped her head in to report three incendiaries had fallen on our roof but they were getting them out.

Finally it grew fairly quiet and we went to bed. But both of us were wakened—hardened as we are to noise—several times before the raiders passed signal came.

Papers, Milk Late.

That morning, the newspapers were late and so was the milk. Delivery problems on streets hit by bombs. The papers had rather more typographical errors than you would normally expect. An indication that printers and proof-readers in Fleet street had more distractions to cope with. We've learned to recognize both these things as confirmation of our own observations as to whether the raid was heavy or light.

It was still dark when I set off for my subway station to catch a train to work. I could see a couple of glows that indicated fires still burning and there was broken glass underfoot.

Bus Route Blocked.

When I rounded the corner of the (censored) there were clusters of red lanterns all about, a muddle of ambulances and people. It had been hit by one of those heavy bombs we heard. They were clearing debris and at one side were some blanket-covered, formless lumps on stretchers. I turned away and caught a bus.

The bus followed an unopened route to the office because an exploded bomb lay in one of the streets and because some others were blocked by glass and debris.

"Bit sticky last night," a voice beside me said. I agreed. I could hear some yawns of individuals who hadn't slept well. But they all took it as a mere matter of course. "Well," the voice said, "maybe it'll be better tonight. Maybe we'll get a bit more sleep. I could do with some more." I agreed again.

Day As Usual.

That day in any office and most other offices was just as any other day. It was still light when I got away and I dropped by a store rather famous for its coats to see what they had on sale as advertised in the morning papers. The store wasn't there. It had been bombed and burned out.

The streets were pretty well cleared up by that afternoon and traffic was jammed but moving fairly well. There were still diversions due to time bombs and debris, but everything was definitely looking better and once more people were looking forward hopefully to a "quiet night."

I thought of the communique, "a number of people were killed" when I passed (censored) where they were still digging.

Metaxas' Death Mourned by Greeks Here

People Will Not Let Their Premier Down, Atlantans Say.

Sadness hung over Atlanta's Greek community yesterday as word of the death of Premier John Metaxas, of Greece, was received, but the morale was strictly thumbs up—"the Greeks will win the war now to keep from letting Metaxas down."

They all felt the death of Metaxas was a terrible blow in a moment of need, but as the Rev. Panos Constantinides expressed it:

"A nation never dies even though its leaders pass away."

Angel Marinos, treasurer of the Greek community here, declared:

"We all feel badly here to receive such shocking news, all the people in Greece feel bad, but they will continue the fight and we will continue working here. The morale is good, I'm sure, and the army, which loved Metaxas too good to turn him down, will now make a harder fight. We lost the very best man we ever had in Greece—I hope we get another just as good."

Memorial Service.

A special memorial service for Premier Metaxas will be held Sunday morning at the Greek Orthodox church at Pryor and Richardson streets under the direction of the Rev. Constantinides. A cenotaph, draped by the Greek flag and surrounded by flowers, will be placed in front of the church. Constantinides said:

"This is a terrible moment for Greece to have their leader die when he was needed for the country. I am sure the new premier, Alexandros Korizis, the governor of the Bank of Greece and a great economist, will make an able follower to Metaxas. The king will find the right men to put in the key positions."

"The people will continue the fight successfully and to final victory. A nation never dies even though its leaders pass away. We are pretty sure of victory because right is with us."

Dr. Anthony Gallis thought the death of the premier would stimulate the Greek people to greater victories.

To "Keep on Fighting."

"Metaxas was the most indispensable man in Greek affairs," he said. "He was an outstanding statesman and an outstanding military man. The Greeks will keep on fighting regardless of who heads the government and will win with the assistance of the American government."

"Metaxas had two or three good assistants whom he had trained to take his place in the case of assassination. They will step in now and complete his aims. The Greeks have something else to fight for now—they have Metaxas to win for. They didn't like him at first but since the war the Greeks everywhere have taken a liking to him. He was a great military man."

James Cotsakis, vice president of the board of directors of the Greek church: "The idea among the Greeks as to what will happen now that Metaxas is dead is there will be no change. An even more active campaign will be launched. The new premier is a shrewd man who knows all the inside dealings and is very strong mentally, physically and with the people. The morale of the people is good and they will be as one with the new government."

"We will wipe out the Italians anyway."

Prepare for Worst, Irish Are Warned

DUBLIN, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Eamon de Valera, Ireland's Brooklyn-born premier, told the nation by radio tonight that it must "prepare for the worst" on the question of imported supplies and announced rationing of tea for the Irish.

De Valera said Ireland had been in danger of military attack and would remain in danger until peace returned to Europe. He warned the nation to build its defenses.

The prime minister also said gasoline would be available only for doctors, clergymen, and essential services for the time being.

He said Ireland's wheat reserves barely were enough to carry the country through until after the next harvest, and he urged substitution of potatoes for flour in Irish diets. He warned that cattle would have to be slaughtered unless they grow the fodder that formerly came from abroad.

2 New Films Are Unreel On Peachtree

Two More Will Be Added to Theater Offerings Tomorrow.

By LEE ROGERS.

Motion Picture Editor.

Paul Muni as a rough and ready French Canadian gives another of the performances the movie public has come to expect of him in an otherwise slow-moving story of the north country called "Hudson's Bay," which opened yesterday at the Fox theater.

The other opening yesterday was "The Invisible Woman," with John Barrymore playing a crackpot inventor of a ray to make people invisible.

It's at the Paramount and has its amusing moments. On this same program is the new March of Time, "Uncle Sam—Non Belligerent," which has promoted an outburst of rage from Senator Wheeler, the pacifist.

"The Philadelphia Story," the screen version which star Katharine Hepburn said "I've heard better than the stage play," opens tomorrow at Loew's Grand. We haven't seen it yet, having waited to see the stage version first.

Adopting a new policy, the Roxy will open tomorrow with the initial offering under its first run program, "Honeymoon for Three," with Ann Sheridan and George Brent, who have been in the gossip columns together since the filming of a 56-second kiss in one scene from this movie.

The Rialto holds "This Thing Called Love" for a third week. It's a great laugh show. Continuing at the Capitol through Saturday is "The Saint in Palm Springs," the "first Canadian," and "Sensations of 1941" on the stage.

"Hudson's Bay," which opened at the Fox yesterday, is a combination of history and fiction purporting to tell of the founding of the great trading organization known as the Hudson Bay Company and the white man's discovery of this great body of water with its adjacent land of furs.

Paul Muni, making his first picture under a new 20th Century-Fox banner, completely puts himself into the role of the French Canadian, Pierre Radisson, the "first Canadian," and with dialect and acting wins the "renegade, traitor and rogue" titles applied to him in the story.

Muni's performance is well worth seeing, but because of the slow, deliberate mannerisms in which he creates his characters, the film itself tends to drag, even despite the moments of humor supplied by Muni and despite the continuous clowning of Laird Cregar, Muni's towering partner in crime who wins fights by bumping his opponents over with his stomach. Think of Man Mountain Dean and you get an idea of the man.

Gene Tierney plays the feminine lead which could have been eliminated and other cast members include John Sutton, Virginia

Rhodessa, and Melvyn Douglas are co-starred in this story.

Paul Muni, making his first picture under a new 20th Century-Fox banner, completely puts himself into the role of the French Canadian, Pierre Radisson, the "first Canadian," and with dialect and acting wins the "renegade, traitor and rogue" titles applied to him in the story.

Muni's performance is well worth seeing, but because of the slow, deliberate mannerisms in which he creates his characters, the film itself tends to drag, even despite the moments of humor supplied by Muni and despite the continuous clowning of Laird Cregar, Muni's towering partner in crime who wins fights by bumping his opponents over with his stomach. Think of Man Mountain Dean and you get an idea of the man.

Gene Tierney plays the feminine lead which could have been eliminated and other cast members include John Sutton, Virginia

Rhodessa, and Melvyn Douglas are co-starred in this story.

"Hudson's Bay," which opened at the Fox yesterday, is a combination of history and fiction purporting to tell of the founding of the great trading organization known as the Hudson Bay Company and the white man's discovery of this great body of water with its adjacent land of furs.

Plane Landed Safely After Mid-Air Crash

2 Men Die in Other Ship; 2 Army Pilots Killed on West Coast.

By The Associated Press.

Two private airplanes collided in mid-air at Pensacola, N. J., yesterday, killing two occupants of one plane. The other landed safely.

Police tentatively identified the victims as Harley Rivers, of Palmyra, N. J., and Norman Bowers, of Maple Shade, N. J. Their plane crashed in an orchard.

Harold Longendorfer, piloting the other plane, landed the other craft despite a badly damaged propeller.

Army Pilots Die.

Meanwhile, two service men were killed, a third was injured and a fourth parachuted to safety yesterday in crashes of two Army planes and one Navy plane on the west coast.

Robert E. Baylis, 25, of Wenatchee, Wash., a flying cadet of the United States Army Air Corps at Moffett field, died in his single-engine training plane which fell near Shafter, Cal.

Crashes Hillside.

A single-engine Army plane from Fort Douglas, Utah, crashed into a desert hillside 15 miles northwest of Tucson, Ariz. Pilot Joseph A. Neil Jr. was killed and a flying cadet, L. T. Tempest, was injured seriously.

G. W. Brooks, Navy pilot-radio-man, of Knoxville, Tenn., parachuted to safety in the Pacific ocean off San Diego, Cal., after his fighting plane from the carrier Lexington became disabled.

at the CITY HALL

Employees of the health and sanitation department of the city government must pay their honest debts, members of the council committee in charge of the divisions, ruled yesterday. The committee, headed by Councilman Paul Butler, agreed to file charges against any employee who fails to pay creditors after a judgment.

The city personnel board yesterday was preparing a formal protest to a proposal to cut two of the six members of the department—Miss Mildred Christian and H. K. Marshall—from the pay rolls.

H. J. Cates, chief of the city sanitary department, yesterday notified the health and sanitation committee that his department will co-operate in cutting down on the number of employees in the division, a program championed by Mayor LeCraw. He recommended that the first vacant post of the year, that of a flusher of sewers, not be filled. The committee concurred.

Proposal to create a board composed of citizens and city officials to attack the local traffic problem and trial of Traffic Lieutenant Cuba Heath on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer are major matters facing the semi-monthly meeting of city council's police committee at 7 o'clock tonight at the police station.

DUPLICATIONS CONFUSING.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 29.—(P)—Duplication of street names and house numbers in some sections of the city and county has prompted postal authorities to warn of possible suspension of service. Officials said the necessity of delivering mail parcels from two to as many as seven times before finding the proper address had proven expensive.

Jurors in Hall Urge Reforms In Pardon Law

Present Administration Is Termed 'Unlawful and Profligate.'

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 29.—Charging that administration of the present pardon and parole law was an "unlawful and profligate racket," the Hall county superior court grand jury today recommended the establishment of a parole board which "would substitute orderly, legal and genuinely humanitarian principles and practices."

The jury also recommended that a new set-up be established in the state Wildlife Division, asking that it be placed "directly under the control of those who support it through the purchase of fishing and hunting licenses, a system that has proven its worth in other states."

FLOYD JURORS RAP PARDON "RACKET"

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ROME, Ga., Jan. 29.—Taking to task the ruling state administration for the "unprecedented and disgraceful manner in which criminals have been arbitrarily set free," the Floyd county grand jury today urged local legislators to champion a movement to curb what the jury termed Georgia's "pardoning racket."

Crossing Death Toll Mounting, Drivers Told

Georgia Safety Leader Alarmed by Increase in Fatalities.

Train-auto collisions like the one which took the lives of six persons at Dalton Sunday are on the increase in Georgia, Safety Commissioner John Goodwin said yesterday.

"Last year 42 persons were killed in such accidents, an increase of 11 fatalities or of 35 per cent over 1939," Major Goodwin said. "Already this year eight lives have been lost in them."

Major Goodwin pointed out that six of this year's fatalities had been within city limits and that special precaution should be given to crossing tracks in urban areas.

"The situation is alarming and everything possible must be done to remedy it," he said.

Major Goodwin said the 42 fatalities last year occurred in 27 crashes while the 31 in the previous year were in 22 collisions.

A survey of accident reports reveals that 21 crashes were on straight roads, Major Goodwin said, and only two were during rainy weather. These in two instances blocked vision; parked cars were obstructions in two other cases and a building, embankment and hillcrest cut visibility in three other accidents.

Major Goodwin said the survey revealed also that 62 per cent of the collisions were in daylight hours.

Miller's Final Note Points to Office Record

Kept Faith, Going With Clear Conscience, He Says.

Here is the statement issued by W. L. Miller yesterday as he prepared to leave his office and return to Lakeland after the house yesterday passed the highway reorganization bill:

"I have found out that such special privileged boys as Contractor John Whiteley in the Talmadge camp do not want me, any more than the special privileged boys such as Hiram Evans in the Rivers camp. Ninety per cent of the members of reality chairman of the board, and business program I have stood for, and many of them have told me that they did not feel I should be put out of the department before my term, held legal by the supreme court of Georgia, had expired; however, they were tremendously embarrassed and 'put on the spot.'"

"They felt their counties would not get any more road work or patronage for the next two years if they did not support the administration bills. I realized their embarrassment, and regretted it, as I have been fighting for a principle in your Highway Department since December, 1937."

"The records show that during the years 1937 and 1938, when I was in reality chairman of the board, we built more miles of roads, both graded and paved, at a lower administrative cost, than has ever been done before or since in any two years by the department before my term, held legal by the supreme court of Georgia, had expired; however, they were tremendously embarrassed and 'put on the spot.'"

"I have worked hard to do an efficient job for the public in my position of trust as chairman of the highway board. I have kept faith with the taxpayers of Georgia and stood stoutly for a fair, nonpartisan and nonpartisan distribution of road benefits throughout Georgia on the basis of merit."

"I am going back home with a clear conscience, feeling that I have done my best to conduct an honest and constructive highway program for all of the people of Georgia. To my friends throughout the state, and especially to the county commissioners of Georgia, I want to say that your co-operation and confidence have been a great sustaining factor to me in my efforts at public service."

Immediate Hearin Is Asked for Mann

Wendell Willkie Moved to Tears By British Pluck in the Shelters

'I Am a Pretty Tough Fellow But I Had To Turn My Head Away,' He Says; German Planes Raid London as He Makes Tour.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—(P)—Wendell L. Willkie visited five sprawling air raid shelters here tonight in the midst of a German attack and said he was moved to tears at the sight of the public's pluck. "I am a pretty tough fellow," he said, "but I had to turn my head away from these people to keep from downright bubbling over." Willkie was recognized easily and cheered wildly when he appeared at the ministry of home security—again without a helmet.

He had brought one helmet from America and was given another by Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Gets Third Helmet.
Herbert Morrison, the minister, shook hands with him, reminded him there was an air raid on and it was the duty of everybody to carry a helmet and gas mask.

Smilingly Willkie accepted both from Morrison.
On his round of the public shelters Willkie was accompanied by Ellen Wilkinson, a member of parliament; Malcolm MacDonald, health minister, and Alderman Charles W. Key.

German planes were overhead as the Republican leader emerged from two shelters.

At one place a young woman edged her way through a swarm of people around Willkie and said "come see my baby."
"The baby must not have been over a week old," Willkie said later.

"We Are Not Down."
In another shelter he talked with a man over 70 years old. "He told me," declared Willkie, "that he would sleep in a shelter forever if it would help win the war."

In all the places he visited the people shouted such things as: "We are not down."

"They won't get us down."
Willkie declared he found things better than he had expected.

"Some fellow gave me a drink of his coffee, and I must say it was better than some in the fancy hotels."

There were many cheers for America, he said, some of the people shouting: "Send us all you have got."

A man with a harmonica played the Star Spangled Banner when Willkie entered one shelter, and the crowd joined in the singing.

To Cut Visit Short.
"Go home and tell them we can take it," one old woman said, patting him on the back.

Willkie indicated tonight he would visit northern England and "Hell's Corner," the much-bombed and shelled Dover area, next week before he cuts short his stay in England.

He laughed at a query as to whether threatened German invasion was causing him to leave earlier than he had expected. "Nothing like that," he said. "It is just a question of making plane schedules."

Expressing his appreciation for the British government's help in arranging his daily touring schedules, Willkie said he planned to go about London by himself tomorrow.

"I just want to get out, walk around and get talked to," Willkie explained.

His shortened stay may prevent him from making a trip to Ireland to see Prime Minister Eamon de Valera as he originally planned.

Meets the Press.
Today Willkie received 35 British newspaperwomen at a press conference in his hotel.

Perched on a coffee table in his room, Willkie expressed a desire to see the exiled monarchs King Haakon, of Norway, and Queen Wilhelmina, of the Netherlands. Asked if he knew either one, he replied:

"No, but I know another queen," then disclosed he had talked to Mrs. Willkie by trans-Atlantic telephone twice since he reached London.

Earlier Willkie had witnessed a demonstration of 60 banner-waving women protesting government food policies.

"Down with oatmeal eyewitness... get rid of Lord Wolton" (minister of food), read some of the banners in the demonstration, obviously timed for his arrival at a hotel for luncheon.

After attending a trades union council meeting with Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, Willkie said he was impressed by the attitude of British workmen.

"There was not one dissenting voice, and I was assured the same applied throughout the trade union movement," he said.

The world progresses—new discoveries make history. Now, thanks to Dr. L. W. Sherwin, a well-known authority on oral hygiene, false teeth and dental plates can be made to glisten with purity and immaculate cleanliness with just a 10-minute daily bath, with amazing Siera-Kleen. It's all so easy—just get a 3-cent bottle of Siera-Kleen—put a little in a half glass of lukewarm water—let your dental plate stay in this glass 10 minutes or overnight, as you choose. Take it out, rinse under the cold water faucet—no brushing is needed.
Then you get a plate free from slimy mucus and staining—a plate sparkling with beauty and glittering with purity. No more dull-looking, murky, dismal false teeth for you—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.—(adv.)

Aid to Italians Seen as Bar to Nazi Invasion

British Expect Attack in Ireland if Germans Move.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—(P)—A British military authority suggested today that the expected early attempt of the Germans to invade England might be abandoned because of the necessity of giving large-scale help to the Italians and the exigencies of Nazi military adventures in the Balkans.

If the Germans do in fact try the thrust across the channel, he added, they will time it to begin "before American aid becomes too pronounced."

As to the Balkans, the informant declared that Nazi mechanics and technical troops in civilian dress were preparing airfields in Bulgaria and that there were eight to ten German divisions in Rumania.

These preparations, he added, might signal a Nazi drive southwards to Salonika to isolate the Greeks in Albania and, with a strong concentration of bombers, to attempt to close the Mediterranean to large British convoys.

Ireland Attack Seen.

Despite all this, he said that the German army, vast as it is, is spread out from Narvik to Massena and from Brest to Bucharest and has large garrisons—for example 70 divisions in Poland—that are "in ticklish position."

This authority, surveying the military situation, said he saw it thus:

The Battle of Britain: When and if the invasion comes, it probably will be accompanied by attacks on Ireland for diversion, but "the real danger spot" is on the southeast coast from The Wash to Southampton, where the offensive would have the support of fighter aircraft from French bases. They might land, said the spokesman, "but we will blow 'em off the beaches."

Spain: Indications are that the Spanish will not give the Germans a free passage through to attack Gibraltar and drive into north Africa. Formal opposition by the battered Spanish army might be slight. But "certain plans have been made to meet eventualities."

France: The Germans might occupy the rest of France, but should they do this "it is possible that French forces in the colonial empire, plus the fleet, would fight from outside bases."

Says Turkey To Fight.
Turkey: Will fight if the Germans move on Salonika "and we are in a position to give her considerable help."

Italy: "Germany cannot afford to let her fall out of the war. As a result, German troops and aircraft are moving through Italy in considerable numbers."

North Africa: General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander, "can no longer afford to take the chances he did, because of the presence of the German air force. The matter of supporting Wavell has become more difficult."

He disclosed that Britain's thus-far victorious African campaign, having hinged at the start on the swing of a single armored division to the rear of Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

"Its orders," he said, "were to go and guard the road back of Sidi. It had supplies for five days. If Sidi hadn't fallen in five days we'd have withdrawn our troops and the whole campaign would have been abandoned for the time."

Dispatches from London saying Wendell L. Willkie would cut short his fact-finding mission and might testify before the senate committee brought a prompt invitation from Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, for him to appear. He said that if the 1940 Republican presidential candidate returns before hearings end, probably next week, "we certainly will call him."

(Willkie said in London he would be "delighted" to appear before the committee when he returns next week, the Associated Press said.)

George also indicated a desire to hear Harry L. Hopkins, former secretary of commerce, who is in London on a personal mission for the President. He said arrangements probably could be made to hear the pair if they return to the United States after the hearings close but before the committee acts on the bill.
Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox will testify on Friday.

Miss Smith Weds Willis Hames In Marietta, Ga.

MARIETTA, Ga., Jan. 29.—Miss Clara Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Smith, became the bride Saturday of Willis Hames at a ceremony performed by Rev. M. O. Sommers at 5 o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

The church was artistically decorated with mounds of ferns and palms, interspersed with cathedral tapers and baskets of white gladioli. Miss Lucy Bailey rendered a musical program.

The bride and groom entered together, the bride wearing a soldier blue costume suit trimmed with kolinsky fur. Her hat was of matching blue and her accessories were brown. She wore orchids with valley lilies.

Mrs. E. M. Smith, mother of the bride, was gowned in powder blue, with black hat and accessories and a cluster of gardenias. Mrs. Hames, mother of the groom, wore black crepe with black accessories, and her flowers were gardenias.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Smith entertained at a reception at their home on Lawrence street for the relatives and out-of-town guests. The dining table was centered with the wedding cake, which was a gift to the bride from Mrs. Marion Dobbs. It was embossed with valley lilies and roses and topped with wedding bells tied with tulle.

The bride and groom left for a honeymoon and on their return will reside at the Clairmont apartments in Birmingham, Ala., where Mr. Hames is located.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Smith, Pensacola, Fla.; Lynn Smith, Columbus, Miss.; Pauline Vining, Meansville, and Mrs. Herbert Harris, Acworth.

Chilling of the Muscles While Overheated, Will Cause Soreness

WILSON'S Weekly RECIPES

Two decades ago, Rector's was the cross roads where glittering names from the Great White Way and Park Avenue dowagers outstared each other as they consumed a special ham for which Rector's were famous. Today, believe it or not, a child of ten can prepare a ham more tender and of far better flavor. All said child has to do is to heat a WILSON'S TENDER MADE HAM, in a moderate oven (350° F.) five minutes per pound. The succulent, melt-in-your-mouth result is all due to the Wilson's secret process.

George Rector
Food Consultant, Wilson & Co.

NEW "HAM AND SWEETS" RECIPE

Boil and mash 5 medium sized sweet potatoes. Add salt, butter, milk, and 2 tablespoons of orange juice. Cover a slice of Wilson's Tender Made Ham with this sweet potato mixture, and top with another slice of ham. Dot with Clear Brook Butter. Heat in 325° F. oven until the ham is a delicate brown.

Remember, only Wilson & Co. makes TENDER MADE HAM, "the ham you cut with a fork."

MOR, of course, is that delicious, new, spiced, cured, pork shoulder meat made by the makers of Tender Made Ham. It's perfect for sandwiches, cold cuts, quick bakes, or to fry with eggs.

Try these with Wilson's Certified Pure Pork Sausage Links
Prepare potatoes for scalloping. Prick sausages and lay on top. Cover and bake till potatoes are tender. Remove cover to brown sausages.

Make a delicious meal-in-one platter by broiling together sweet potatoes (boiled, skinned and halved), pineapple slices and Wilson's Certified Pure Pork Sausage.

HUNCH FOR LUNCH
When you've been up for your ears all morning with housework and suddenly you hear the children clattering up the steps, remember the can of Wilson's Certified Chili Con Carne on the pantry shelf. It takes just a minute to heat, and if you get the kind with beans, you have a complete meal for them and for you.

For smiles at breakfast, try serving him the new Wilson's Certified Family Style Sliced Bacon in the handy 2-pound package. It's cut from lean young porkers, given that rich smoke cure, then sliced to be man thick and packed, upright, back on the rind. The result is a "stay-fresh," sliced bacon.

Good to keep on hand for breakfast, lunch or dinner.

I will be with you again (as they say on the radio) at the same time, same place, next week. G. R.

WILSON &amp; CO.

The Wilson Label protects your table

as a regular thing. These parous times there are all kinds of health columns. Some cost money. Some are available for nothing—as premiums with good purchased. From the latter type of health column I quote a paragraph from an article on pneumonia which was apparently composed by a schoolboy:

"That coldness or drafts is an important factor in chilling the white corpuscles and allowing harmful organisms to make headway in the body has been known for a long time."

A slight trick, slipping into the passive mood when you know darn well you are lying. By saying something "has been known" you get by, and the chance is slim that any one will challenge you to come right out and tell the name of any one who has known it. That "chilling of the white corpuscles" is a typical schoolboy touch.

For years baseball pitchers have been putting on a sweater between innings or putting the sleeves of their sweater over their pitching arm to prevent cold and stiffness interfering with the strength and elasticity of their muscles. All fair enough so far, though it has nothing whatever to do with pneumonia—and to prevent developing a cold from becoming overheated. If, then, getting overheated and exposing one's self to cold or a draft will cause a cold which is the beginning part of pneumonia, the lesson is plain.

Most athletes understand why it is wise to keep the arm or any other part of the body warm after vigorous use, especially in the earlier stages of the game. The reason is, of course, to prevent soreness, stiffness, maybe charley-horse. These conditions are due to cold, or to chilling of the muscles and ligaments. But it is childish to imagine that any illness whatever, especially such an illness as pneumonia, can ever be so caused.

Charleyhorse is a complete or partial rupture or tear or break of a tendon or muscle fibres. Lameness, soreness and stiffness in muscles following unaccustomed vigorous exercise or work is usually due to irritation by the products of combustion which are imperfectly removed through the circulation, although actual small tears or ruptures in the muscle fibres may occur in some instances. At worst it never makes the victim ill, just stiff and sore and weary for a while. More perfect removal of the irritating waste products through the circulation is aided by (1) warmth, (2) moderate exercise of the same muscles after not too long an interval of rest, and (3) massage.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Callus
Can you give any advice for removing a large callus on ball of foot? Sometimes it gets quite painful.

(W. J.)
Answer—Wear an oval pad or soft leather lengthwise of the sole, attached to the insole so that it just covers the area of the callus to support the transverse arch. Paint callus once daily till it softens and rubs off, with the familiar corn remedy—thirty grains of salicylic acid dissolved in one-half ounce of flexible collodion. Keep the collodion off from neck of vessel and keep the vessel tightly corked for it evaporates rapidly and leaves a hard mass.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

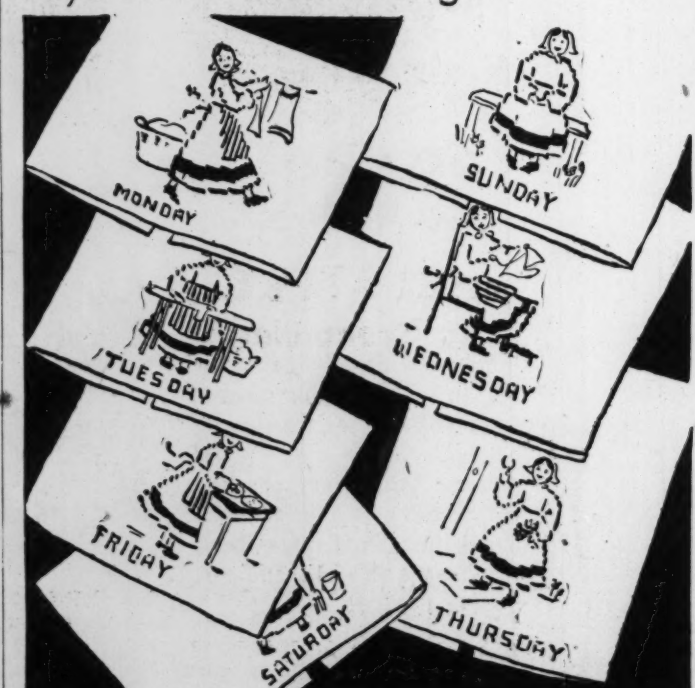

Mrs. A.: "You never talk about your children, Mrs. B. Aren't you proud of them?"
Mrs. B.: "Yes, but I don't believe they like to have us discuss them any more than we would enjoy their talking about us."

Mrs. A.: "My Alice is the most unusual girl. You know she... etc."
Mrs. B.: "Jane doesn't either. She said to me once... etc."
Mrs. C.: "If you think girls are difficult, you just ought to have the job of raising Bill."

"Do unto others" is a timely precept to remember when we are tempted to talk about our children.

Days-of-the-Week Design

DESIGN NO. 535.

Cut Daily Calorie Intake And Forget Strict Diet

By Ida Jean Kain.

I resent it when someone says, with a mixture of triumph and apology, "I have reduced, but I didn't do it on your diet." That sounds as if I had the idea that you could reduce only by going on a diet—and preferably my diet! Of course, you don't have to go on a diet of any kind in order to take off weight. You can do it simply by following your regular film people is to limit the extras or by cutting out the food that is boosting the calories too high.

A case in point is that of a reducer who got along fine merely streamlining her dinner and eating as usual for the other two meals. A busy executive found that all he had to do to reduce was leave off the malt beverage. He clipped off three pounds a week without making any other change in his menus!

A woman who loves butter has made it a practice to take only one pat, one-fourth-inch thick, in place of the usual two pats with each meal. Result: She is losing a pound a week regularly—and she's not on a diet! Many a reducer turns the trend of the scales by cutting out the desserts and pastries.

Out in Hollywood where weight is a bugaboo, a good percentage of the stars have the habit of taking a generous salad as their first course. That takes the edge off the appetite and makes it less easy to over-eat of the more fattening dishes. Another strict rule among the film people is to limit the quantity of liquid taken with the meal. They say this not only helps them to control their weight but keeps them from having that "heavy feeling."

Any change in eating that reduces your calories below the amount you use for energy will let you lose weight. For example, if you are in the habit of making away with two slices of bread and butter per meal, and cut down to one, you are taking at least 375 calories out of your daily diet. If that number of subtracted calories is below the number you require, you can lose half a pound a week—perhaps more.

You can make a big dent in the calories by restricting the starchy foods. It's a smart slimming rule never to take more than one starchy food at the same meal. When you have a filling serving of spaghetti, leave off the bread.

Scan your menus closely to see whether you are eating too many fats, sweets, or high calorie beverages. Perhaps you are not taking the extras at mealtime, but sandwiching them in between. If you will be honest with yourself, you can easily put your finger on the dietary excess that has caused your weight to climb. Change that habit and you'll slim down! It's not what you'd call "going on a diet," but it gets results and may be easier for you than following a specified list of foods.

Metro Once Fired Deanna Durbin

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—More trouble for "Citizen Kane" and Orson Welles. The Hays office is frowning on some of the statues adorning the magnificent house in the film. And so Hercules will wear a little skirt! Irene Dunne, who gets $150,000 for her imminent picture at R. K. O., was telling a friend the other p. m., "and at one time I was under contract there for $30,000 a year." For which sum Irene had to appear in four or more films. . . . Deanna Durbin's experience is an outstanding example of that sort of thing. She was earning $50 a week at Metro when they decided she was not worth it. I wonder how much that studio would be willing to pay for her services now—if they could get her?

Alice Faye has been seen twice with George Sanders, but that does not mean she is going to marry him as the gossips predict. What a town this is! You go out with a man once, and you're engaged. Twice, and you're married. Three times, and it's divorce. . . . Sonja Henie wants to be the associate producer of her next and last film at Fox—"Sun Valley." It starts in February. . . . Joan Leslie, who was 16 years old Monday and has received a heap of picture attention at Warners, desires a salary increase of 100 per cent. She regards $500 a week as a nice, round figure—and that's what she is asking for. . . . Paulette Goddard eating chop suey at Cameraman James Wong Howe's restaurant—with Anatole Litvak.

Joan Crawford had an interesting onlooker—Ingrid Bergman—for the preliminary scenes in "A Woman's Face." Ingrid made the picture in Sweden. The scar—around which the film revolves—was invented by her husband, a doctor. Joan's scar is the handwork of a plastic surgeon working with the studio make-up expert. She has her right eye pulled down slightly and a welt on her cheek. But it is not as bad as it seems because Joan will wear a hat pulled down on the right side. And her left side is more photogenic anyway.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (Spencer Tracy) has the flu, and his picture is postponed until the end of the week. . . . Garbo is interested in doing a movie in which she would play a Swedish psychiatrist, with William Powell as her co-star. . . . That reminds me, when does Norman Shearer start her next film? There has been some talk of this and that film for Norma. But there is no starting date for any of them. . . . Talking about Norma brings me to Shirley Temple, who recently called at Metro to inspect her dressing-room. She looked blankly at the names "Myrna Loy" and "Norma Shearer" on neighboring doors and inquired, "Who are they?"

Jeffrey Lynn may be the second male movie star to be drafted for the army. (William Holden expects to go in July.) Lynn has just received word from the draft board to stand by for a call—also in July. "I am supporting my parents and a sister," Lynn told me yesterday, "and I probably would have been exempted on those grounds, but I have a brother who works in an aviation plant and he gets the family exemption. He is earning only $23 a week, and on that will have to take care of the others." "Oh, well," concludes the very likable Mr. Lynn, "it's not until July, and anything can happen between now and then. I'm not that of an 'are you getting married?' question."

MY DAY: Attending College Freshman Forum

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—It was a busy afternoon in New Haven, Conn., yesterday, but a very pleasant one. On arrival, I was met by Mrs. Wolters, whose husband is head of Pierson College, and a committee from the freshman forum. Mrs. Wolters was a most solicitous hostess and gave me a cup of tea and a chance to dress before we received some guests between 5 and 6 o'clock.

One of the guests, Miss Marian Whitney, was one of Mr. Souvestre's pupils, just as I was. We have always had a mutual interest in the past, though she attended the school in France and I attended it later in England. I was particularly touched by the fact that Miss Whitney wore a pin, which Mlle. Souvestre left her in her will, in order that I might see it and be carried back to the days when Mlle. Souvestre wore

I think mutual devotion draws people closely together, even when they know each other rather slightly. I always feel as though Miss Whitney were really a friend, simply because we share a devotion to Mlle. Souvestre and cherish her memory.

I had dinner with the committee in charge of the freshman forum and the professor at the head of Jonathan Edwards College, Mr. Robert D. French. Then we proceeded to the forum meeting, where I spoke for half an hour and answered questions for nearly an hour. Later, some of the boys came back to Mr. and Mrs. Wolters' house, and we talked and were fed and warmed. I, at least, was much encouraged and reassured by this contact with youth in a serious mood.

The young people in charge of the forum did everything possible to plan the meeting well and make it a pleasant and easy occasion for me.

Never have I known more thoughtful, kindly hospitality than that which surrounded me in Professor and Mrs. Wolters' charming home.

On the way up in the train I read a little book called "My Sister and I," by Dirk Van Der Heide. It is a diary of a Dutch boy refugee, a very simply told story of the days when Holland was taken over by the Germans; of the effect of constant bombing; of the sights on the road as they made their impression on the consciousness of a young boy, who tried very hard to be manly and strong and to record his little sister's weaknesses with sympathetic understanding.

His mother's death, the flight to England, and, finally, his trip to America, are all spoken of with restraint. But the final revelation of their effect on him comes when the doctor over here thinks he is a little nervous. The significance of this little book lies largely in what it reveals to us on the condition of children all over Europe. Can we never do away with such strains for our children?

This afternoon Mr. Jerome Davis is coming to us to talk about how the Y. M. C. A. helps to build bridges for friendship between nations even in wartime through its contact with prisoners in camps in Canada and abroad. It may seem a little thing, but I feel sure that we should not neglect even the smallest thing which can make for kinder feeling.

A Saucy Princess Dress and Jacket

By Lillian Mae.

Here's a "sign-of-spring" ensemble for a girl who likes clean, young, slim lines. A two-timing style, Pattern 4684, for the dress is smart all on its own and the jacket goes with everything. Lillian Mae has chosen princess lines for their litesome grace and easy making. She has interrupted the flow of the front panels with an upcurved center waist-seam that's very slimming. Notice the engaging shape of the neckline—you might edge it with a front of lace or ruffling, using more of the trim at the short sleeves and round the hemline. Now turn your attention to the well-cut, neatly buttoned jacket. Let it have long or short sleeves; have it matching or contrasting the dress.

Pattern 4684 is available in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 16, dress, takes 3 3/4 yards 39-inch fabric and 5 1/2 yards lace edging; jacket, 1 1/2 yards contrast.

Send 15 cents (15c) in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number. The new 1941 pattern book by Lillian Mae is finished! So let Mr. Mailman bring the world of fashion to your doorstep! This colorful book brims over with easy-to-stitch outfits for every age; every hour. It shows original, distinctive designs in suits, ensembles, sportswear, afternoon and evening frocks and home styles. It brings news of fabrics and accessories. A valuable book to keep at home for easy reference, and its low cost is 15 cents!

Paint Pictures On Glass

LOSE FAT ... this safe way!

What fun you have indulging your artistic talents with a printed pattern to help you out! You just lay the pattern under your sheet of glass and follow the lines with your brush.

Among the other fascinating subjects you can paint this easy way are "Old-Fashioned Bouquet," "Gay-Feathered Parrots" and "Old Oaken Bucket."

No need for elaborate equipment. From three inexpensive tubes of paint—red, yellow and blue—you can mix any shade you want with a color chart to guide you. A touch of black or white household enamel will darken or lighten a color. Pink, for instance, is just a light red. To get it you mix red and white. Green you make by combining blue and yellow.

Popular Atlantans Return From Brazil on February 12

• • • • • INTERESTING NEWS is forthcoming today in the announcement that those popular Atlantans, Grant and Louisa LeRoux, who have been living in Rio de Janeiro since last summer, will leave on February 12 for North American shores. They were married last June, you will recall, and left at once for Miami, where they remained for two months before going to the gay Brazilian capital.

Grant and Louisa will make the return trip by clipper and, according to information received by Louisa's mother, Mrs. Ayres Robert, they will land in Miami at the Pan-American airport two days later. It goes without saying that Mrs. Robert will be on hand to meet them, for she plans an early departure for Miami.

Mrs. Robert, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Charles LeRoux, Grant's parents, had first-hand news of Grant and Louisa recently when Mr. and Mrs. Broadus Williamson, of Macon, returned from Rio, where they visited the Atlanta couple.

Grant and Louisa live at No. 5 Rua Francisco Sa, a street entering Avenida Atlantica, which skirts the fashionable Copacabana beach. The balcony of their apartment overlooks the beach, which is considered one of the loveliest and most beautiful in Rio. The accompanying photograph shows the popular couple strolling down the sidewalk paralleling Avenida Atlantica and the beach. It is of particular interest to note the sidewalk, which is world-famous, being made of stones inlaid in black and white for its entire length, a distance of two miles. Upon their return to the States, Grant and Louisa will visit in Atlanta before the former is assigned to his new post in this country.

• • • • • MR. AND MRS. FRANK NEELY plan to leave today to spend the weekend in Washington, D. C., with their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Parker, and their small grandson, Daniel Neely Parker. Mr. and Mrs. Neely have not seen their grandson since shortly after his debut upon this mundane sphere, so, of course, they are particularly interested in seeing how much he has grown in two and a half months. They also plan to take along their camera for the purpose of making colored movies of the baby. Thus to relieve the pangs of separation on their return home, you see.

Mrs. Parker is the former Rachel Neely, of Atlanta, and since her marriage to the Washingtonian they have resided in a charming apartment in the Concord at the corner of Swann street and

New Hampshire in the national capital.

• • • • • HAVE YOU ever seen bread? Well, Dot Spratlin has one. It all happened like this:

Dot and Gus Martin were strolling by a well-known bakery one afternoon when the popular blond sub-deb remarked about the tempting appearance of the beautifully swirled loaves of French twist bread in the window.

Sunday evening, when Gus arrived for his date with Dot, he brought with him a loaf of the bread weighing eight pounds! He had placed a special order for it with the bakery in order to surprise Dot.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spratlin, Frances Spratlin and Dot have eaten French twist bread every day this week. And, Sally surmises, that they will thrive on it for a good many days to come, if they expect to finish the loaf!

• • • • • WHEN SUB LYNN becomes the bride of Horace Bronson Jr. on Saturday, she will carry out the traditional bridal custom of wearing something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue. For the something old, the bride-elect will carry an exquisite lace handkerchief which has been carried by brides in the groom-elect's family for four generations. Her bridal ensemble will be new, and for the blue of her costume she will wear hand-made garters.

Mimi Chapman has loaned her a pair of white gloves to carry out the borrowed feature of the tradition, and to insure good luck, the bride-elect will slip a dime in the heel of her slipper. The coin belongs to Myrtle Landers and has been used by four other brides, all of whom were close friends of the owner.

MR. AND MRS. GRANT LE ROUX.

Watch Family Now While Epidemic Colds Are Spreading

At a treacherous time like this, with an epidemic of contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFGLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION... put a few drops of Vicks VapoRub up each nostril. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because VapoRub is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you will find that a few drops of Vicks VapoRub helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) use Vicks VapoRub to relieve misery. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warm cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both VapoRub and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks VapoRub and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.

Constitution Staff Photo—Bill Mason. Mrs. Daniel O'Day Jr., of Rye, N. Y., who is pictured with her adorable young son, Danny, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie Sadler, at their home on Thirteenth street. Mrs. O'Day is the former Miss Ida Sadler and has a host of friends here. Accompanied by her son, she will return to Rye this week.

Pair To Marry At March 15 Rites

Miss Martha Ewing, lovely brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ewing, and her fiancé, John Eastland Jr., have chosen March 15 as the date for their marriage, the ceremony to be brilliantly solemnized at 8:30 o'clock in the evening in the First Presbyterian church.

The nuptials will assemble as bridesmaids feminine friends of the bride-elect from near and far. These will be Miss Mary Ellen Cook, of Tampa, Fla., who will be her cousin's maid-of-honor, and Misses Emmakate Vretman, Ruthanna Butters, Medora Fitten, Mesdames Thornton Deas, Del Fleming, William Chandler, Harry Gunnin and Nat Harrison, of Beaumont, Texas, as bridesmaids.

The bridal pair leaves Friday for Louisville, Ky., to spend the weekend with the groom-elect's aunt, Mrs. Katherine Waggoner.

Mrs. Murdoch Euen, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, was guest speaker at the meeting.

Miss Wilson Weds Ptolemy T. Harris

ST. STEPHENS, Ala., Jan. 29.—Miss Elizabeth Wilson, of Atlanta, Ga., youngest daughter of Mrs. L. M. Wilson and the late Mr. Wilson, of this city, became the bride of Ptolemy Tinsley Harris of Silverstreet, S. C., formerly of New York, on Sunday at a high noon ceremony taking place here at her mother's home.

Rev. T. C. DeLaney, of Mobile, Ala., officiated. A musical program was presented by Miss Thelma Perkins, of Mobile, Ala., violinist.

Miss Zelma Smith, of Atlanta, lighted the candles. She wore a gold crepe gown and a shoulder spray of pink camellias.

Miss Nixie Norris, of Decatur, Ga., was the bride's maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a dusty pink crepe gown offset by black accessories. A shoulder spray of rose-colored camellias completed her attire.

Miss L. Wilson, of Anniston, Ala., brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Beverly Risque Wilson. She chose for her wedding outfit a soldier blue crepe gown accented by wine accessories. Her off-the-face hat of soldier blue felt was trimmed with a shoulder-length veil. She wore a shoulder spray of white roses and a strand of pearls as her only ornaments.

Mrs. Wilson chose for her daughter's wedding a black crepe dress and a shoulder cluster of white gardenias. Mrs. William H. Harris, mother of the groom, wore a rose crepe dress and a shoulder cluster of white gardenias.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Thomas O. Riddle, sister of the bride, and their mother, Mrs. L. M. Wilson, entertained at breakfast.

Miss Theone Norris, of Decatur, Ga., kept the bride's book.

The bride and groom left for a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Silverstreet, S. C.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Harris, of Silverstreet, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wilson and daughters, of Anniston, Ala.; Mesdames J. W. Luke and Willis Miree, of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. and Mrs. Wilson Gaillard and Miss Flora Gaillard, of Mobile, Ala.; Mrs. A. B. McDermott, of Atlanta, Ga.; and Miss Artie Norris, of Decatur, Ga.

SHADY DALE, Ga., Jan. 28.—The marriage of Miss Mary Blanche Martin, of Atlanta and Shady Dale, and Lonnie C. Blackman, of Tallapoosa and Macon, took place New Year's Day at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown, uncle and aunt of the bride, in Shady Dale. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. M. Brackman, pastor of the Methodist church at Shady Dale, and was witnessed by the immediate families and a few close friends.

On the anniversary of the marriage of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Martin Sr.

Paul Stewart, of Atlanta, sang, and the wedding march was played by Mrs. Vera Hall, also of Atlanta.

The bride was a radiant picture in her bridal gown of white net and Alencon lace made with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Her veil of bridal illusion was fingertip length and hung from a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. W. C. Martin Jr., who wore a turquoise blue gown with a shoulder spray of gardenias.

Mr. Blackman chose as his best man, Sergeant W. C. Martin Jr., brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackman left for a wedding trip to Florida after which they will live in Macon. The bride's traveling suit was dusty rose flannel with brown accessories.

Interesting Social Affairs Fete Prominent Brides-Elect

Listed among social affairs of yesterday were several interesting parties given in compliment to popular brides-elect of the season. Among them was the buffet supper at which Dr. and Mrs. J. Sam Guy and their daughter, Miss Florrie Margaret Guy, entertained at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue for Miss Anne Bellinger and her fiancé, Charles S. Archer Jr., of Baltimore, Md., whose marriage will be an important event tomorrow.

A profusion of spring flowers and greenery was used in the artistic decorations throughout the home. The table in the dining room was overlaid with a Venetian lace cloth and centered with a heart-shaped silver container filled with white gladioli, narcissi and fern, the heart motif having also been carried out in the refreshments.

Mrs. Lyle Frederick Bellinger, mother of the bride-elect, presided at the silver coffee service. Invited for the occasion were the members of the families, the bridal party and out-of-town guests here for the wedding.

Another enjoyable affair of yesterday was the luncheon given by Mrs. Nat Hardin, of Forsyth, in compliment to Miss Mary McGaughey, who will become the bride of Ellis Gay at a fashionable wedding taking place February 10.

The party was held in a private dining room at the Piedmont Driving Club, the luncheon table having for its central decoration a silver bowl filled with spring flowers and flanked by silver candlesticks holding lighted pink tapers.

Covers were laid for 18 close friends of the honoree and honoree. Miss Julia Chapman, whose marriage to Ray Retterer, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be a brilliant event of next week, was the central figure at the luncheon given by Miss Anna Elizabeth Newton of Forsyth, at the Mirador room of the Capital City Club.

The bridal motif was carried out in the table decorations and covers were laid for a group of friends of the bride-elect.

Mrs. Hugh Howell's luncheon at her home on Park lane complimented Miss Marguerite Jones, who will wed Lieutenant Pope Fuller, of Fort Benning, at a ceremony to take place February 11.

A handsome lace luncheon set was used on the dining table, which was centered with a graceful arrangement of spring flowers.

Invited for the occasion were Mrs. S. J. Fuller, mother of the groom-elect; Mrs. Charles Sumner Jr., Mrs. Charles Williams, Mrs. Carter Prather, Mrs. Will Cole Jones and Mrs. Emily Sewell.

Miss Edna Power, whose marriage to Emory Wilcox Clark, of Knoxville, Tenn., will be an event of February 1, was the inspiration for the bridge-party at which Mrs. H. L. Chafin entertained at her home on Peachtree Hills avenue.

Pastel-shaded, spring flowers decorated the reception rooms of the home and the guests included the members of the honoree's wedding party and a few other close friends.

Another interesting affair was the luncheon at which Mrs. Calvin McMillan entertained at the Georgian Terrace hotel complimentary to Miss Mary McGaughey, who will become the bride of Ellis Gay at a fashionable wedding taking place February 10.

Butts Switches Earl Marshall To Right Guard

Lack of Backfield Speed Is Noticeable; Lines Are Okay.

By JOHN MARTIN.
ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 29.—The wind blew down through old Sanford Field with the same sting it always had in January. Sophomore backs and seniors, too, missed blocks and passes. Old College, over 156 years old, had the same musty look and the university moved on today, apparently blind to the fact that football players sometime go shopping for shoes and choose taps instead of cleats.

The famous misnomer, spring practice, rattled through a chilly, but bright January day. There was nothing to indicate that one of the sophomore ballcarriers recently yawned at winter drills.

Forty-odd black-shirted Bulldogs went through a snappy offensive drill and appeared none the worse after it was over.

ARDUOUS SCHEDULE.
Coach Wally Butts, who is grooming his Bulldogs for perhaps the most arduous schedule ever undertaken by a Georgia team, brought out the crying towel only when the lack of speed in his backfield glared through a performance that only occasional blocking kept from being everything except encouraging.

Butts made one of what he hopes will be few shifts in today's drill. He pulled the highly touted Earl Marshall, who had been booked as a fullback prospect, out of the backfield and jammed him in at right guard, where there appears to be a weakness. Marshall was used at both center and guard at Belmont-Abbey, N. C.

One of the most encouraging facts, or guesses, gleaned from the practice came from center, where the twin tanks, Bill Godwin and Clyde Ehrhardt spread over the field. Although these lads are mere sophomores, they promise to share with Quinton Lumpkin and Bum Day the claim as Georgia's greatest centers.

LINES ARE OKAY.
Between his hawking for something that looked like a full-fledged tailback, Butts admitted that he would be able to field a fair pair of lines this fall. That is, unless something happens to jam the works.

Behind the lines, he himself is wondering what lies ahead. Speed must come from somewhere before the Bulldogs can go to town. And if it's in the Bulldog, it still is waiting for July.

Gillespie Only Seeded Player To Meet Upset

Billy Dropped in Straight Sets by Larned; Riggs, Kovacs Win.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 29. (P)—Eighth-seeded Billy Gillespie, of the University of Miami, was bumped out of the university's invitational tennis tournament today—the first casualty among the favorites.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, former national champion, downed Bud Hart, of Miami, 6-4, 6-3, while Frankie Kovacs, of Oakland, Cal., was disposing of George Clark, of the University of Miami, 6-3, 6-1.

Jack Kramer, of Rollins College, whipped Vincent Paul, of Seattle, 6-1, 6-0. Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Ore., defeated Lawrence Shippey, of Waycross, Ga., 6-0, 6-0.

In tomorrow's quarter-finals, Kovacs plays Cooke, Riggs meets Sabin, Kramer faces Larned and Mulloy tackles Surface.

KILLS FIRST SNAKE.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 29.—M. A. Sims, a farmer southwest of Valdosta, killed the first rattlesnake of the 1941 season yesterday. The snake was seen with its head out of a gopher hole and killed. It measured five and a half feet in length and wore on its tail 13 rattles.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Sign of Spring Happy Almand was tied up on the telephone and couldn't get away. You could tell the long-winded conversation wasn't making him very happy.

Willis Fowler was free. He rushed up with a nickel in his hand and said, "Have a drink . . . it's on me."

He shouldn't have said it so loud. He almost caused a stampede in the composing room. Brother printers, not believing their ears, rushed up. "Fowler's buying!" they shouted.

I saw the beaming countenances and heard the cheery greetings of fellows I hadn't seen since last October. But Fowler wasn't buying for everybody. The original offer for one stood. (Editor's Note: Someone suggested the nickel Willis used to buy the drink was the first one he'd ever made.)

Others offered to buy me a drink. A spirit of conviviality prevailed. I noticed the dispatch with which sports copy was being handled and how rapidly the proofs were forthcoming.

I looked around and was greeted cordially by such fellows as Chester Marks, George Bowdon, Bob Neal, Luke Kenady, Buck Alexander, Frank Elliott, Tom Johnson, George Stone, Glenn Peace, Jack Holmes, O. T. Smith, T. J. Smith, Red Mays, Red Tully, Dixon Hall, Quinton Florence, Bill Griffin, Fred Brady, John Trammell, etc.

It seemed like a dream. "What's the big idea?" I finally asked Willis Fowler. "Oh, think nothing of it, pal," Willis responded.

"We'll be seeing you—in March when the Crackers begin their exhibition schedule."

Feds Move In Federal agents are mopping up in the dove territory of Georgia. Anticipating that law violators might figure there wouldn't be many state game protectors in the fields because of a change of administration, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service sent for an additional force of federal men.

In the last two days, according to Roy Moore, of the government service, formerly the biological survey, federal men have apprehended 38 violators in central and south Georgia.

These violators either overshot the limit or were shooting over baited fields, or both.

"We had a whole lot rather not have to make cases against hunters," Moore declared, "but the law must be observed even if the state does not have a large force in the field at the present time."

Moore said some of the cases would come up in federal courts, others in local courts. It all depends on the nature of the violation.

At any rate, the maximum federal fine is $500 or six months in jail, or both.

Georgia violators of the dove limit may not realize it, but they are cutting off their nose to spite their face, as it were.

In many sections there is a plea for closed seasons on the dove because of an alarming decrease in their number. And wanton destruction of those which remain simply hastens their extinction.

There may be some in the reading audience who remember the fate of the passenger pigeon. The dove is headed the same way.

In Short

Here's a sports question that is a hardy perennial: "Which of these come closest to tying Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs in a season—Hank GREENBERG, Jimmy FOX, Hack WILSON? Yours truly, George AVERY, 1 King street, Carrollton. . . . Greenberg and Fox each hit 58 home runs in a season, while Wilson hit 56. . . . Nine years ago Charles C. PETERSON, nationally known billiard expert, had seven colleges in his national organization. . . . Today he has 264. . . . Here on an annual instruction tour, Mr. Peterson revealed he managed Willie HOPPE for 12 years. . . . Interesting point: "It doesn't take years of practice to make a billiard star. . . . Hoppe won his first championship 46 years ago. . . . Most of the billiard championships have been won at tender ages." Peterson's son, HERB, played Hoppe Tuesday night. . . . Peterson wired son Herb before the match—"Don't play Hoppe; play billiards." . . . Bob JONES employed that theory in golf. . . . He never played an opponent; he played par. . . . In winning the sixth district football championship, Monticello High, coached by V. E. THORNTON, was scored on only once in regular season. . . . Dixon GLOVER, captain and halfback, was voted the outstanding back in the district. . . . While husband Burke DAVIS, sports editor of the Charlotte News, convalesced from the flu, Mrs. Davis, the former Evangeline McLENNAN, of Atlanta, wrote his column under the heading, "This Is the Missus." . . . She did a noble job of pinch-hitting, too, having had a lot of newspaper experience around here. . . . Zipp NEWMAN (Birmingham News) predicts that Georgia sophomore named SINKWICH will be back in a Red and Black uniform in the fall. . . . Taft WRIGHT, the former Cracker who last season was the best hitter the White Sox had, once was fired off the Greensboro (N. C.) team after a tryout as a pitcher. . . . Just think this one over—if Rapid Robert FELLER really is getting 30 grand from Cleveland, that's more than Walter JOHNSON made in all his first six years of baseball. . . . Old-timers recall Johnson as a fair speedball pitcher.

Coaches Cox, Howell Resign Posts at L. S. U.

Howell Appointed Yale Backfield Coach; Cox Going Into Business.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 29.—(P)—Head football coach Bernie Moore, at Louisiana State University, announced tonight that Ted Cox, line coach, and E. E. (Blue) Howell, backfield coach, had resigned, effective immediately.

Moore said Cox, former Tulane head coach and line coach at L.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29.—(P)—Ogden Miller, Yale athletic director, said tonight that E. E. Howell, assistant football coach at Louisiana State University, had been appointed Yale backfield coach.

Miller refused to discuss other changes or give details of the Howell appointment.

S. U. for the past two years, was quitting the coaching profession to enter private business.

Howell, backfield mentor at L. S. U. for two years, has accepted a coaching position with a major university, Moore said.

"Staff adjustments are being made to take care of these vacancies," Moore asserted, "but we probably won't have anything to announce for several days."

Atlantan Shoots Hare, Gets Quail

AMERICUS, Ga., Jan. 29.—An Atlanta sportsman, here on a hunting trip, espied a Moll. Hare in a clump of briars. Discovering he was too close to the rabbit to shoot, he backed away several steps. Taking dead aim on his prey, he fired. In quest of the bunny, he found a dead quail instead.

A companion of the Atlantan cleared up the mystery. He said he had wounded a bird not far away, and suggested the quail dropped dead at that point and the hare had sneaked away, unobserved.

Gaynell Tinsley To Quit Football

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 29.—(P)—Gaynell Tinsley, All-American end on Louisiana State University's football team in 1935-36 and later star of the professional Chicago Cardinals, said today he believed his pro career was over.

Visiting his Alma Mater's spring grid workouts, Tinsley let Trainer G. F. Striplin look over his knee, weak since he tore a cartilage in October. Striplin said it seemed to be getting along well and that an operation probably would be unnecessary.

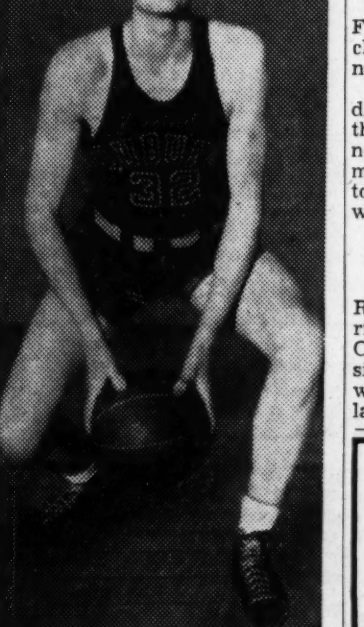

Tinsley declared, however, "I guess I'm just washed up as a pro player. I just feel as though another bad knock on it would take my leg right out from under me. So I guess I'll find something else to do."

Greenberg's Draft Questions in Mail

DETROIT, Jan. 29.—(P)—Hank Greenberg's draft questionnaire is in the mail, officials of Board No. 23 said today, and the big Detroit Tiger outfielder will receive it in Honolulu, where he is on vacation.

Though the questionnaires ordinarily must be returned in five days, the time is extended in cases where the person involved is absent from the city.

Greenberg's number, 621, is expected to come up about June 1. He has indicated he will not ask for deferment.

LEADING SCORER—Shag Hawkins, star center of the Auburn Tigers, will appear here Saturday night against the unpredictable Georgia Tech five. Hawkins, rangy junior from the coal hills of Dora, Ala., is one of the leading conference scorers and spark plug of the undefeated Plainsmen.

RUDY UNSIGNED BUT KEEPS IN TRIM—First Baseman Rudy York and his employers, the Detroit Tigers, haven't come to terms as yet on that matter of the 1941 contract. But Rudy is in fine fettle by virtue of daily workouts on the basketball court of a Cartersville, Ga., gym. Just at the moment he's concentrating on the hard trick of shooting 'em into the basket from a squatting position.

Lampe Calls Vols Best S.E.C. 5 in Many Years

Georgia Coach Explains Bulldogs Have Great Offense But Are Weak on Defense.

By JOHN MARTIN.
ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 29.—Gaunt Elmer Lampe has little hope of gaining any weight this season. Not if basketball victories control his ups and downs in the balancers.

The Georgia coach was back from Macon today, but a victory there over Mercer last night failed to shorten the distance from his thin hair line to his last chin whisker.

"You can count on us not to win the championship," he admitted. "We just haven't got the defensive strength to hold a good scoring team."

OFFENSIVE TEAM.
Lampe explained that his Bulldogs were an offensive team. That they required 50 or more points to win a game.

"Last year we could win with 40, for we could put Alex McCaskey on any star shooters and pretty well stop him."

While he was indicating Georgia a cinch not to win the title this year, which nobody expected anyway, Lampe was just as certain that it would be Tennessee.

He described the Vols as the best team the conference has had in many seasons. He rates them ahead of Kentucky and a safe No. 1 choice to win the tournament.

ALL PLAY WELL.
"It's better this year than it was. There are any number of good teams, capable of knocking off the others any night, particularly at home."

He named Auburn, Alabama, Florida, Tulane and Tech in this class, just a notch under the Tennessee-Kentucky bracket.

The Bulldogs were loafing today to avoid staleness. It appears that they are a fragile outfit, and not able to take too much punishment. George Poschner appears to be in line for a starting forward job from now on out.

OWENS RELEASED.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—(P)—The Red Sox announced today the outright release of Coach Marvin Owen. The club announced the signing of Pitcher Bill Fleming, who was obtained from Hollywood last August.

Louise Beaten By Miley, 3-2; Wins 2d Match

Dorothy Licks Bauer, 4-3, Before Losing to Cothran, 1 Up.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 29. The Atlanta delegation is all out of the tournament after putting up a brave effort that was all in vain. Starting off this morning, I beat Jean Bauer by 4 and 3. It was a spotty match, going back and forth in the holes won and lost. We were all even at the turn and I got into the swing of things on the back side and won enough holes to finish up on the 15th. The ball was going well and I thought maybe I would play pretty good this afternoon.

Looking back over the past tournaments, it seems that Jane Cothran and I have met in nearly every one. So, not to be different, we clashed this afternoon. As is the usual procedure, we were both erratic. However, we scored fairly well, with a 79 for Jane and an 80 for me.

TWO DOWN AT NINE.

At the end of nine holes I was 2 down, but got the 10th back only to lose the 11th. But then I took the short 12th and was 1 down at this point. The 13th was halved, and at the 14th Jane broke my heart. I was on the hole in one and she was in the sand trap. I had this hole all counted as mine. Jane goes down in the trap and knocks the ball up for a dead 3 and my putt rimmed the cup and the hole was halved.

Now, coming to the long par-five 15th, Jane went out of bounds and I won this one to be on even terms going up the 16th fairway. This hole was halved and the 17th was won by Jane. I got on the bank of the canal with the second, and took a five while Jane got herself par four. We halved the 18th and that was the match for Jane by 1 up.

SAME AS LAST YEAR.

I remember very well last year that I lost in the second round to Betty Jameson on the 18th also. Louise Suggs came through this morning, but lost out this afternoon to Marion Miley by 3 and 2. Louise played nice golf but Marion was just a little better.

Elizabeth Hicks had her troubles all day long. In the morning round she played Mrs. Solomon and just won on the 17th green. Then in the afternoon she really had a difficult time. She met Nancy McClave, from New Jersey. Nobody knew much about her when the round started, but by the time it was over they were finding out things. It seems that Nancy took Elizabeth to the 22d hole before she could win.

I joined this little twosome on the 19th and believe me I certainly

Sayre's Invitation To House Party Puzzles Austin, Vivian's Brother

INSTALLMENT II

"Why not? Oh, I remember. You were in Jean's net yourself before you went away, weren't you?"

"I don't care for the way you put it, but, yes, I have long admired Jean as any one must who knows her. I'm glad she's so congenially mated."

"No one is all happy, from his back to his tail, as Kipling or a Chinese proverb or somebody said. But Jean is satisfied—with her home and her husband and her baby—and—forgive me—but I hope you won't stir her up, with old memories and all that."

Sayre stared at the speaker. "I beg your pardon," he said.

"Oh, you know what I mean. Vivian has his faults, and it's good of Jean to put up with them as she does, but he is very jealous, and if Jean—"

"I cannot let you go on, Forrest. You have no right to talk to me as I know you want to talk, and I'd rather stop now."

"All right, then. I only meant a friendly hint, for Jean's sake."

"For Jean's sake? Then she isn't happy with Vivian? Is he—"

"Yes, he is and he does. He flirts with any of our sort that he happens to admire, and—some of other sorts."

"Does Jean know?"

"Rather! Why, once or twice he has brought a film star out here for a weekend."

"And Jean?"

"She was perfect. A correct hostess, smiling, pleasant, just a trace of hauteur, but giving Vivian no chance for criticism. But the film lady in each case had no wish to come again."

"Why are you telling me this?"

Brandon Sayre looked inquiringly reproachful.

Austin Forrest returned the explorer's gaze. Unlike his brother, Austin had strong, fine face, an air of justified self-confidence. He spoke slowly and definitely.

"Because I knew you would hear it from some one else, and I'd rather be the one to tell you. And I mean it when I tell you of Vivian's fierce jealousy of his wife. And if you and Jean pick up your old love affair, it will mean a hell of a time for her, and incidentally for yourself."

"I deny that Jean and I ever had a love affair."

"All right, Sayre; we won't quibble over words. And if you and she are not specially interested in each other, so much the better for all concerned. But take a friend's advice and don't let such an interest begin."

"I'm half inclined to knock you down."

"Oh, don't be silly. Put that off for a day or two, and see how things work out. Do you fence?"

"Yes, I may say I do."

"Then there's your chance. If you really want to knock me down, do it with foils. I'm a rotten fencer."

"Time enough for that. And if I misunderstand, I'm sorry."

Jean Forrest, in her dressing room, listened absent-mindedly to her maid's questions as to what she wished to wear.

"Oh, the silver lame, I think; or, no—not that tonight. Maybe the—oh, I don't know! Run away, Mimi, for 15 minutes—no, 10 minutes—and then come back and I'll be ready to dress."

The pretty girl went away, and Jean sat in front of her dressing table, staring at her reflection in the mirror, but seeing nothing.

Brandon home again! That thought filled her mind to the exclusion of all else.

Expanded and threw out fears in all directions, but most prominent, the gravest fear of all, was the uncertainty as to her own will power.

She Jean Forrest, who had never before feared man or woman, who had never feared society or scandal, who had braved her husband's anger, who had laughed at his lapses from faith and honor, had upheld him and stood up for him through thick and thin, through evil report and good report, now—now, Jean Forrest was afraid.

Afraid of Vivian, more afraid of Sayre, but afraid of all, afraid of herself. Afraid of that brave, strong, invincible self that had stood by her for 25 years, without faltering.

Yet when, less than an hour ago, she had looked into Brandon Sayre's deep gray eyes, she knew that she loved him and had loved him for the two years he had been away, even though she had deceived herself into thinking otherwise. And now, what could she do? And her answer was instant—nothing.

Vague dreams hovered in her mind, but the ever-present thought of her child, of little Flo, blotted out everything, save right and duty.

Sayre had said no word, had given no look, had even smiled no smile that hinted at memory of the past, but she knew—she knew—that he loved her even more than he had when he went away.

Her duty, then? Only to look that love out of his heart, and see to it that it should not grow again.

Her life with Vivian would be harder, her life in society would be harder, for now, in addition to her present burdens she must carry the thoughts of unattainable joys.

No, there was a further duty. She must not carry those thoughts; she must root them out of her heart; she must not love Brandon Sayre; her own future and that of her child depended on her faithfulness to herself.

She looked again in the mirror. And she forced a smile. Her great dark eyes, a moment ago pathetic, now were normally bright, and beneath their long curling lashes, showed alluring, mysterious.

A certain air of mystery was one of Jean's greatest charms. It was partly cultivated, for she found it useful, and too, it was often real, and she wondered at the mystery of her own life.

And so, the ten minutes passed, Mimi returned, and found her idol smiling at her.

"The burnt orange and silver," Jean directed.

The clever maid did Jean's lovely dark hair in becoming rolls, which followed no set style, but reflected Mimi's talent.

She made up Jean's face, with so little material and so much skill, that the lily was really painted.

Vivian drifted in, as he often did, to select her jewels. Through their short married life he had showered her with gifts, and he loved to see her wear them.

He selected what he wished her to wear, and then stood impatiently waiting for Mimi to fasten them in place.

"You may go, Mimi," he said, pleasantly, as she finished her task.

He turned to survey Jean. "Perfect!" he said, speaking with sincerity. "I wish I cared more for you."

"I'm glad you don't," she said, showing no interest. She knew her husband's heart.

"How dare you say that?" But he was laughing, and he made a quick movement and caught her in his arms and kissed her repeatedly.

"You will answer back, will you?" he teased her, and kissed her again.

"You've made me late for dinner," she said as she escaped him. "Go on down and have the cocktails served at once, or dinner will be spoiled. Ring for Mimi, will you; she must do my hair all over."

"Oh, hell, can't you take a little kiss without looking like a barmaid?"

"Yes, but not a bear hug. Come in, Mimi, just fix my hair right, will you? Go on, Vivian, they are all waiting."

"Let 'em wait. I won't go till you are ready."

Laughing, Jean was soon ready, and they went together down the broad staircase.

On the way, he whispered to her, "I had to wait for you, or you would have slipped into the nursery, and—would have been there yet!"

This was so true that Jean said nothing but gave him an assenting smile.

"You needn't have hurried yourselves," Austin greeted them. "I ordered the cocktails. Have one?"

Vivian laughed, took a glass and sat down by Suzy Kirk.

"Whose little girl are you?" he asked, gayly.

"I dunno; I haven't found a sponsor yet."

"I'd like to train for it. But I have so many little girls."

"Yes, I've heard that."

"Oh, you have? Are you, perhaps, older than you look?"

"No, I'm younger—much younger. But I think they're going out now."

"Yes; they are. I will seat you by me."

"No, thank you, my seat is engaged. I belong to your brother."

"So you do," and Austin claimed her, leaving Vivian in the unusual position of being left.

Three or four neighbors had been invited, for final plans must be made for the tournament.

The dinner was gay and Austin, who had feared being bored by the very young lady he had selected for a partner, was surprised to find that she devoted all her time and attention to a neighbor, whose name was John Elman.

A somewhat staid youth he seemed, for though the Forrests knew him slightly, he had never been at the house before.

But with his usual perspicacity, Austin soon divined that the volatile Suzy was only playing off, and was coquetting with the neighbor with the admirable intention of stirring Austin's interest in her.

This amused him, and soon he rounded on her, saying, "Where are your manners, little girl? You can't talk to one man all the evening. It isn't done. It's against the rules."

"I make the rules," Suzy said, calmly, turning back to him and quickly realizing that he didn't care whether she turned or not.

"I understand you," Austin said, "but you are trying to play a game you haven't mastered."

"Yes, I know it," and the girl sighed. "That's the worst of being so young. But, anyhow, I'm a bit of a fencer."

"I don't believe it."

"Yes, I am, honest. I've been taught ever since I was a child. I'm a novice but next year I'll be a junior. Oh, I know the 'ring of the glittering steel!'"

"I can't believe it, but you must show me later on. Keep still now, I want to hear what Sayre is saying."

Brandon Sayre was not fond of talking about himself or relating tales of his exploits in jungle lands. But as a guest, he must needs accede to his host's request for just one story of his life.

Without extravagant talk, without any boasting, Sayre told of incidents that were in themselves thrilling, and became more so when his expressive face added to the effect of reality.

"What a hero you are!" Jean exclaimed, impulsively, as the applause died away.

Vivian looked at her sharply and, noting it, she added, to Sayre, "I wish I could have been there with you!"

"The setting would have been just right," her husband observed.

"I always thought you were half barbarian."

"I suppose I am," Jean said, and smiled. "That's why I like fencing."

"Fencing isn't a barbaric custom," Austin put in. "It's very civilized; indeed, it's dandified."

"All fighting is barbaric," Anne Fraser declared, and Vivian responded her.

"Fencing isn't fighting, Anne," he said. "It's a game, a recreation. We're not considering duels, but fencing as an art, and I call it one of the fine arts."

"It is," Sayre agreed. "And the barbarians have their own knowledge of fine arts in fighting, but it is not at all like our fencing."

"Tell us about it," Suzy begged, but Jean said no, it was time to go to the gymnasium or they would never get through all they had to do.

The Sargon Fencing Club was an old and exclusive organization. In winter it convened in New York City, but in the summer-time, its members were scattered, and meets were held at various country houses of the members.

Both Vivian and Jean Forrest were expert in the art, and they held high positions in the club.

Vivian had taught Jean, and she had proved an apt pupil. She possessed the peculiar traits necessary to the fencer, precision and quickness, rhythm and co-ordination. And in addition to Vivian's instructions, she had been thoroughly and carefully drilled by the best masters.

Jean enjoyed fencing, though not to the same degree as the Forrest brothers, but she really liked the occasions when a tournament or a practice party was held at their summer home.

She gathered up her feminine guests now, and soon the men joined them and all went to the gymnasium.

This was an enormous room in the front of the palatial Long Island house. It was on the ground floor, and was fitted up with every conceivable apparatus for exercise. From Indian clubs to a trapeze, from a punching bag to a rowing machine, nothing had been omitted.

But special attention had been given to the fencing outfit. Collections, beautifully arranged on the walls, showed swords and rapiers, cutlasses and scimitars, as well as daggers, dirks and stiletos.

These things were always of great interest to visitors, who thought them more attractive than the foils which claimed the attention of the fencers.

There were easy chairs and occasional tables, humidors and cellarets, and the gym was frequented by idlers quite as much as by the club enthusiasts.

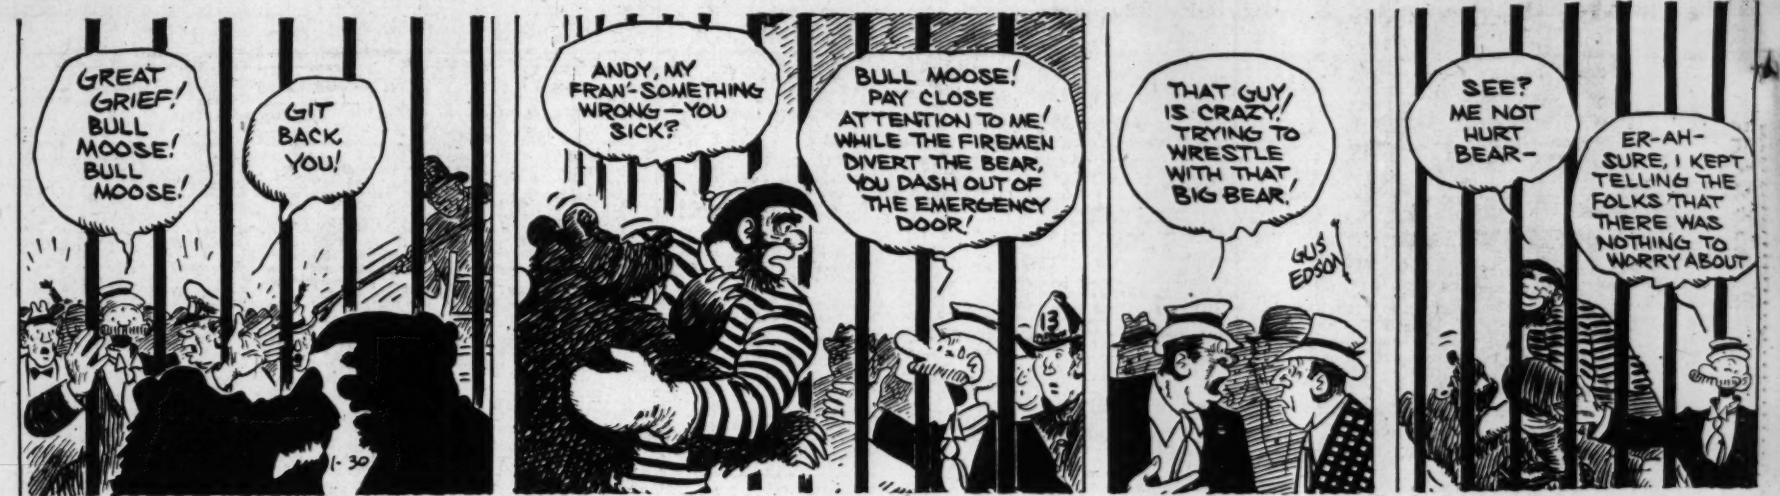

On this evening, Vivian insisted that the tournament be discussed and arranged for in all the important particulars. Details could be considered later, but the main points must be settled. All agreed to this, and a real business meeting followed.

Jean had little to say as to arrangements, but Anne Fraser expressed her views strongly and at length, until Peter Halsey remarked to Austin, in an aside, "Them wimmen spiles the ball!"

However, the Forrest brothers and John Elman had their way in most things, and Brandon Sayre's wide experiences in many fields made him a valued adviser.
